EXCITING SCENES IN COURT.

Shearman as an Objector and an Undertaker.

BEACH PLAYS WITH HIS OPPONENT.

The Judge Subduing the Legal Tempest.

Conclusion of Beach's Eleven Day Speech.

A VERY IMPORTANT DAY.

The advocate for the plaintiff, Mr. Beach, finished his long address of eleven days yesterday afternoon, at half-past three o'clock. The court room was crowded to excess, and the discomfort caused by the heat was felt by everybody. It was a day of interruptions. Mr. Beach was uncommonly mild and tractable and allowed the defendant's lawyers a latitude of interposition in the course of his speech that surprised everybody. Shearman was suddenly struck with a mania for interruptions, so constant, provoking, impertinent and out of place as to stir even the placid temper of the Judge. The check Beach kept on his temper was the marvel of the audience. Had he given way there is no telling what a scene of confusion might have resulted. Shearman might be likened to a blue-bottle fly buzzing without intermission in the ear of a big sturdy ox, which feels the annoyance but disdains resenting it. The last day's performance of Mr. Beach was not equal to the first. The lawyer was less pertinent, less eloquent and vigorous than on previous days, and the peroration fell short of the general expectation, more especially as it was read from manuscript, the reading vastly interfering with the vigor and effectiveness so characteristic of Beach in his extemporaneous efforts. Mr. Beecher and his brother attended. There were fewer attempts at applause than before, but the day was destined to prove in the end the most exciting of the trial so far.

THE NEW EVIDENCE.

Beach had concluded. Abbott had read the requests to charge. The day of the trial seemed all but spent. There was a moment of silence. The jury turned to the Judge, as if to ask what was to come next. The people in the audience began to search for their hats and stray umbrellas. But the end was not yet. Out of the knot of lawyers which surrounded the long table in front of the jury rose the tall and commanding figure of Mr. Beach. There was resolution in his face as he turned to the Judge and determination in his voice as he spoke.

"If Your Honor please," Mr. Beach began, in a cold and dignified way that commanded attention, "there is a subject which I had proposed to present before submitting this case to the jury. It is in regard to the new evidence which we propose to offer. I understood Your Honor to say that it could be presented in Chambers, in the absence of the jury. We have ready to present the affidavits in the newly discovered evidence."

THE CHARMED CIRCLE.

There was a look of anxiety upon the faces of Shearman and Tracy; Mr. Evarts sat unmoved. Mr. Beecher looked toward the person of Mr. Beach with more intense human interest depicted on his face than he had displayed during any of the closing days of the trial. Mr. Tilton turned his face neither to the right nor the left but only tilted back in his chair. Ex-Judge Morris had risen and had his right arm buried in his coat pocket, as if in search of important documents.

Judge Neilson replied, rather listlessly, that the counsel for both defendant and plaintiff could agree among themselves as to the time when they should be ready to argue the question.

"We have no knowledge of the matter," said Mr. Evarts, rising to his feet, and speaking with the studied composure of an exceedingly innocent man. "It would be awkward to suppose that we are to appear to-night," he concluded, dropping back into his seat as if nothing whatever had happened or was about to happen.

Yet, Mr. Beach had fired a mine; and already the report was flying around the corridors of the Court House, "Beach has moved to reopen the case." The court room was aglow with anxiety.

"NOW IS THE TIME."

"We should have no objection to present the affidavits in the case now," said Mr. Beach.

"My suggestion is that the new matter, if spread out before the jury, might confuse them," remarked Judge Neilson.

"We believe the question ought to be disposed of to-night," said Mr. Morris, holding a bunch of documents in his hand, "but that is a matter of discretion for Your Honor to decide." Mr. Morris had fished the affidavits out of his pocket and waited the proper moment to get them into the Judge's hands.

"It is not an application to operate on the evidence which has been made here during the close of the trial," said Mr. Beach.

"I should be glad to do anything to accommodate the counsel," remarked His Honor.

"We propose to hand the affidavits to Your Honor," resumed Mr. Beach, as his colleague, Mr. Morris, passed up the documents, "and to make the motion that we be heard." (Sensation in the court room.)

The audience could hardly believe what they heard. It was not a surprise, in the ordinary acceptation of the word, but the incident of the moment contained material for a whole night's quandary. The minds of all the persons in that assembly grasped the possibilities of the future. They were familiar with the facts embodied in the affidavits, for they had read them in the HERALD more than a week ago. But now they imagined all sorts of new issues. Queries, born of a morbid curiosity, were the children of each individual brain. "Would the Judge admit the testimony?" "How would Evarts fight their introduction?" "Would the great pastor be caught beyond hope of extrication?" "Would this testimony, like all the rest offered by the prosecution, be sneered at just because it was in Tilton's favor?" "Was the end yet far off?" Yet no conclusion was reached and none could be until the oracle in the Judge's chair spoke.

The affidavits, printed elsewhere, passed into the Judge's hands, and the proceedings, so far as counsel were concerned, ended for the day.

"Gentlemen," said Judge Neilson to the jury, "please get ready to retire. I would recommend that if you receive letters that do not relate strictly to business, they be laid aside until this case is over. I have, within the past few days, found it convenient to pursue that course.

AFFIDAVIT OF GEORGE C. LEYS.

CITY COURT OF BROOKLYN.—Theodore Tilton vs. Henry Ward Beecher.

City of Brooklyn, County of Kings, ss.—George C. Leys, being duly sworn, says he is a druggist by profession and resides and does business in the village of Whitestone, Long Island; that for more than twenty years immediately preceding June, 1873, he resided and did business as a druggist in the city of Brooklyn; that on the 13th day of May, 1871, he carried on business as a druggist in the city of Brooklyn, at the corner of Clinton and Fulton streets; that ever since his residence in the city of Brooklyn deponent has been acquainted with the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, and for ten years preceding January, 1873, deponent was well acquainted with the said Beecher and saw him frequently at his (deponent's) store, at which said Beecher was a customer; that on the 13th day of May, 1871, said Beecher called on deponent at his store, corner of Fulton and Clinton streets, Brooklyn; that a conversation then and there occurred between said Beecher and deponent, in the course of which said Beecher introduced the subject of poisons and their effect upon the human system; that in reply to questions propounded by said Beecher deponent gave his opinion as to the characteristic operation and comparative efficacy of various poisons, saying to said Beecher that, in deponent's judgment, Prussic acid would produce the easiest and most expeditious death; that in the course of said conversation deponent, at the request of said Beecher, exhibited to him an ounce vial of Prussic acid; that said conversation continued for some time on various topics, and at the end, and as said Beecher was about to leave, he said he would take said ounce vial of Prussic acid; that said Beecher did purchase and take away said ounce vial of Prussic acid, and he is charged for the same on deponent's ledger, page 93, as follows:—

"May 13, 1871—1 oz. Prussic acid......... 50c."

that said entry in said ledger is, as deponent believes, in the handwriting of John A. Kirkland, one of deponent's then clerks; that it does not appear by said ledger that any other article was sold to said Beecher on said 13th of May, 1871; that there are other entries of charge against said Beecher on said ledger, immediately preceding and immediately following said charge of May 13, 1871. GEORGE C. LEYS.

Sworn before me this 15th day of June, 1875.—CHARLES B. HAZLETON, Commissioner of Deeds.

AFFIDAVIT OF JOSEPH LOADER.

CITY COURT.—Theodore Tilton vs. Henry Ward Beecher.

City of Brooklyn, County of Kings, ss.—Joseph Loader, being duly sworn, says that he resides at No. 401 McDonough street, Brooklyn; that he is an upholsterer by trade; that in the month of October, 1869, deponent was working on a job in the house of Theodore Tilton, No. 174 Livingstone street; that about two o'clock on a day of said month and year, which deponent cannot specify, while engaged in laying stair carpets on the main stairs in said house, deponent saw the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher entering the front door of said house, and Mrs. Elizabeth R. Tilton approach the said Rev. Henry Ward Beecher; that said Henry Ward Beecher and said Elizabeth R. Tilton met in the hall, a few paces from the parlor door; that on meeting, the said Beecher put his arm around the waist of said Elizabeth R. Tilton and drew her to him, partly lifting up her body, at the same time kissing her on the cheek and she kissing him; that these demonstrations of affection between said Beecher and Elizabeth R. Tilton were very amorous and extraordinary in so much as in a marked manner to attract deponent's attention; that after so meeting, said Beecher and Mrs. Tilton, with his arm still about her waist, entered the front parlor, through the door leading from the hall, then closing the door behind them; that while said demonstrations were passing between the said Beecher and Mrs. Tilton deponent directed the attention of his fellow workman to them; the name of said workman is John J. Price; that a few moments after said Beecher and Mrs. Tilton had entered the parlor and closed the door said Price went down the stairs and through the dining room into the back parlor, and looked through the folding doors and into the front parlor; that said Price then returned to deponent, and in a short time after deponent went into the said front parlor, through the hall door, to get his hat and other things, which were by the mantel piece in said parlor; that having got said things deponent quickly turned to come out of said parlor, and, in so doing, saw the said Mrs. Tilton reclining on a lounge behind the door, with her clothes up above her knees, and the said Beecher in the act of rising from the said lounge, with one hand upon it; deponent walked immediately into the hall and soon left the house in company with said Price. Deponent knew said Beecher and Elizabeth R. Tilton at the time of the above mentioned occurrence, and was not mistaken as to their identity. JOSEPH LOADER.

Sworn before me, this 15th day of June, 1875, JOSEPH M. PEARSALL, Notary Public, Kings county.

AFFIDAVIT OF JOHN J. PRICE.

CITY COURT.—Theodore Tilton vs. Henry Ward Beecher.

City of Brooklyn, County of Kings, ss.:—John J. Price, being duly sworn, says that he is an upholsterer by trade and resides at No. 290 Schermerhorn street, Brooklyn; that he has heard read the affidavit herein of Joseph Loader, and he adopts and affirms the statements therein as far as they affect deponent; that on a day which deponent cannot designate, in the month of October, 1869, while working on a job in the house of Theodore Tilton, No. 174 Livingston street, Brooklyn, deponent saw Rev. Henry Ward Beecher enter the front door of said house, and Mrs. Elizabeth R. Tilton going to meet him; that when they met in the hall said Beecher clasped her around the waist, kissed her and she kissed him; that they then repaired into the front parlor, his arm still around her waist, and closed the door behind them; that deponent went on with his work for a short time, but, thinking something wrong, went through the hall into the dining room and through the dining room into the back parlor; that deponent there looked through the folding doors, between the front and back parlors, and saw the said Elizabeth R. Tilton * * * * on the lounge in the front parlor, and the said Beecher * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *; that thereupon he came back and informed said Loader of what he (deponent) had just seen; that deponent then made the remark to said Loader which caused said Loader to go into said front parlor to get some of his things; that said Loader returned and told deponent what he had seen, as set forth in said Loader's affidavit; that soon thereafter deponent and said Loader, having finished their work, left the house; that deponent knew Rev. Henry Ward Beecher and Mrs. Elizabeth R. Tilton at the time above mentioned, and knew they were the persons above spoken of and described. JOHN J. PRICE.

Sworn before me this 15th day of June, 1875.—JOSEPH M. PEARSALL, Notary Public, Kings county.

AFFIDAVIT OF S. D. MORRIS.

Theodore Tilton vs. Henry Ward Beecher.

City of Brooklyn, Kings County, ss.:—S. D. Morris, being duly sworn, says, that he is one of the attorneys of record and associate counsel in the above entitled action; that some days after the close of the evidence on both sides in said action deponent was informed that important evidence for the plaintiff existed and could be produced; that deponent without any delay made inquiry concerning the matter, and ascertained that G. C. Leys, Joseph Loader and John J. Price were referred to as the parties having knowledge of such important evidence; That deponent sought and obtained interviews with each of said parties; that the facts stated by said parties to depon[ent] are contained in their respective affidavits, and deponent verily believes the facts so stated by them are true. That deponent was entirely ignorant of the existence of such evidence until a few days since, and was unable to produce it prior to the close of the testimony. That such evidence is important and material for the plaintiff in this action, and deponent asks that it may be received. S. D. MORRIS.

Sworn to before me this 16th of June, 1875.—RUFUS M. WILLIAMS, Notary Public, Kings county.

AFFIDAVIT OF THEODORE TILTON.

Accompanying the above affidavits was one also made by Theodore Tilton, in which is formally set forth that he was unaware of the existence of the evidence referred to in the above affidavits of Messrs. Leys, Loader and Price until made acquainted with it by one of his counsel—viz., ex-Judge Samuel D. Morris.

MR. BEACH'S LAST DAY.

Mr. Beach commenced his tenth day's address by correcting, as usual, something uttered on the day before. He attributed to Mr. Beecher certain sentiments in regard to the Sabbath which he had reason to believe were to some extent a misrepresentation. As Mr. Beach was proceeding to quote further from Mr. Beecher's sermons Mr. Shearman, with his glasses on, rose up and interrupted the speaker by declaring there were more errors than one committed by the plaintiff's counsel in quoting from Mr. Beecher. Mr. Beach contended that he had read correctly, and objected to interruption from the other side. Mr. Evarts said that if the writings of parties can be brought in as evidence they become very much exposed. He held that while Mr. Beecher's writings were accessible literature, still when the author of these writings is a party to the litigation it is unfair to travel outside the evidence produced.

Mr. Beach insisted that his two learned friends on the other side had travelled outside the evidence.

Mr. Shearman objected to the course of the counsel. He had already found the citations from Mr. Beecher's sermons incorrect, and as there were no sermons of Mr. Beecher's in evidence counsel was out of order.

Mr. Beach bristled up as Shearman attempted to read from Beecher's sermons to show how Beach misrepresented them in his quotations. Mr. Shearman created by popping up and asking Beach if he was ready to withdraw his challenge to prove that his quotations were correct. Judge Neilson repeated several times, much to the discomfiture of Shearman, that the objections, explanations and corrections he desired to make were out of order at the moment and would only be heard after plaintiff's counsel got through with his address. Mr. Beach hoped His Honor would not even then allow counsel on the other side to make these explanations the basis for making another appeal to the jury.

Mr. Beach resumed the reading of Beecher's sermons, two quotations from which seemed to show that Mr. Beecher was to a large degree sceptical of some of the most cherished doctrines and traditions of Christian people. Counsel endeavored to show that the man who arraigned Mr. Tilton for heresy and heterodoxy should look well to see if he stood on such unimpeachable ground as justified him in the task he undertook. The doctrines of Christ are dispensed with and discarded by Mr. Beecher. He does not believe in a state of and puts his own views above and beyond the inspired words of the Scriptures. Beach seemed to amuse rather than to frighten the Plymouth church people who listened to his analysis of Beecher's theology. Counsel was as eloquent as many distinguished pulpit preachers who undertake the defence of Christianity against the assaults of scepticism and infidelity. There was a general feeling, however, that Beach was wasting too much time on a subject of only secondary importance. Beecher seemed quite content to hear the counsel rattle along on this road. Beach was rather weak when he referred to the character of Beecher's sermons and the style of their delivery. "I noticed," cried the counsel, as if he had discovered a heinous offence, "that in one of his sermons, published last month, there were eighteen notices of laughter."

As instances of great levity counsel quoted from Beecher, "I would have knocked the ribs out of old Jeremiah if I could have got at him," and "the wine of the spirit knocks the cork out of the bottle." These expressions, Mr. Beach held, were too flippant for a sermon on the subject of election. Neither the audience nor the jury appeared to think there was anything very criminal in them.

A STIRRING SCENE

took place after Beach finished reading. The following was the citation from Beecher that roused the bile of the irritable Shearman and of all his legal confrères:—

There are thousands of bad men who, like him (the Prodigal Son), have good aspirations and honorable instincts; they are longing to ascend by the path that has led them down to ruin. Every man has an equator. All below that line is animal, and all above it is himself. Many a man lives entirely in his lower nature, until in wild indulgence of it the door is open to that which is above. Trouble brought the Prodigal Son to himself. He was alone and starving. He had time among his grunting charge to repent. He did not say, "I will go to my father and state the circumstances." He called it sin and attempted no excuses or palliation. The man whose soul evinces higher aspirations is partly reformed already. He knows how to go down and how to go up. The son returned with a good orthodox confession. Ah, yes! It is a pity that other prodigal sons do not return with a like confession. He found himself embraced and forgiven. Our Father in heaven, art Thou meaner than the fathers of earth? There was another son who heard the singing and dancing. He was angry and would not go in, and his father came out and entreated him. Now I would rather have been the Prodigal Son than his brother. "He was too stingy to get drunk." "He was too cautious, too unsympathetic to sin lasciviously."

Shearman asked Mr. Beach on what page did that appear. Beach informed him, and then up rose Shearman to deny that Mr. Beecher ever used such language. Great confusion followed. Beach kept his temper well, but Shearman looked as if he were about to draw out and pitch in with his doubled-up digits. Beach quickly passed him over a slip cut from some Hartford newspaper. Shearman's blood was beginning to boil. He protested to the Court in the most energetic tones he could command, against the course of the counsel. He said it was an anonymous newspaper and that Mr. Beach added comments of his own without making any distinction. Mr. Beach smiled, and turning to the Court said, if the Court and jury were so unintelligent as to be unable to distinguish between a comment and a quotation he would recommend Mr. Shearman to act as interpreter.

THE DEBATE

went on for a little while longer and then a perfect explosion took place on the part of Mr. Shearman. Mr. Beach had passed him over the newspaper slip containing the sermon on the Prodigal Son, and then occurred the following little scene:—

Mr. Shearman—What does the gentleman mean by handing me that as an authority? What did he mean by passing that paper over to me?

Mr. Beach—I didn't. (Laughter.)

Mr. Shearman—Am I responsible for his blunder? (Laughter.)

Mr. Morris—He isn't responsible for it himself.

Mr. Shearman—When he speaks of a clergyman as inviting to the communion Socinians and Quakers and Mormons, is it for him to approach me for questioning his quotation?

Mr. Beach—I haven't approached you, my irascible friend. (Loud laughter.)

Judge Neilson—Mr. Beach, will you proceed?

Mr. Beach—Yes, sir, I will. The publication, the slip containing every word I quoted from the sermon on the Prodigal Son, was handed to me by a gentleman who said that he wanted to preserve it. I copied it.

Judge Neilson—I recollect that sermon very well. Your statement of the Prodigal Son was correct. I had the Christian Union and I read it in that. (Applause.)

Mr. Shearman—I beg to say that the gentleman has undertaken to quote language which Mr. Beecher never used.

Judge Neilson—You have reserved for you the right to make corrections.

Mr. Shearman—Are we to open the evidence?

Mr. Beach—Oh, no; there will be no corrections to make.

Mr. Shearman—Then I denounce this whole thing as a perfect outrage upon justice.

Judge Neilson—I said, Mr. Shearman, again and again, this is not evidence; it is mere illustration.

Mr. Shearman—I don't think it will have any effect at all.

Mr. Morris—It seems to affect you. (Laughter.)

Judge Neilson—Well, I don't wonder at Mr. Shearman's being very earnest.

Mr. Beach—I don't either. I would be in earnest if I was in his place. (Laughter.) But ——

The foregoing was

THE GREAT EPISODE

of the morning. Shearman was so close to Beach, who had his back to the table, and looked half pleased, half angry at the turn affairs had taken, that he could scarcely turn to address the Court without knocking his adversary over. Shearman was a plucky as a Skye terrier barking under the jaws of a Newfoundland mastiff. The spectators were extremely tickled, and even Judge Neilson was compelled to smile. When were once more restored Beach proceeded to say that, while he admired Henry Ward Beecher, he insisted that, no matter how high he stood as a teacher or a preacher; no matter how eminent his services, past or present, he was as amenable as the poorest and humblest to the laws made to govern, protect and preserve society. Counsel again alluded to the theory on which the whole case for the defence rested—namely, the representations made to Mr. Beecher by Bessie Turner of the cruelties Tilton practised on his wife and the criminal outrage he attempted on herself. These representations turned Beecher against Tilton, as he said himself, but yet, though he could easily have seen Tilton and expostulated with him, he never once attempted it, and though he lived for three long years on the ragged edge of despair and in the horror of great darkness, he never once called on Mrs. Tilton with or for an explantion of the troubles that had fallen upon him.

PEACE AND QUIET

ARRAIGNMENT OF TRACY.

Mr. Beach resumed after recess by declaring he had one duty to perform, and it was evident he was drawing near the end of his address, while there was a strong suspicion that General Tracy was about to come in for some hard knocks. He referred to Charles O'Conor as being the head of the profession, and it was painful to his feelings to have to say a word in regard to a single member of the profession who, in this particular case, had overstepped professional limits and outraged professional decorum. When Mr. Tracy elected to go upon the witness stand and assail the character of witnesses for the plaintiff he had no choice but to examine his pretensions as a lawyer and a gentleman. He was the first chosen friend and counsellor of Theodore Tilton and from him and also from Moulton and Woodruff he received all the secrets they had to give. Tilton was unwilling that all the matter connected with the character of his wife should be committed to the ear of a third party. It was then he exacted from Mr. Tracy a pledge that he would not become counsel for Henry Ward Beecher, yet it is seen that after he has received

THE SECRETS OF TILTON

he is found on the other side appearing as the counsel for Beecher before the Plymouth Church Investigating Committee, opposed to the interests of Tilton. He is next found as the sponsor for the opening address on the part of the defendant, full of falsehood and defamation, and when he sees his master (Beecher) overborne by three witnesses Tracy leaps into the breach and sacrifices himself for his client. To him it was a wonder that he (Tracy) should have submitted to such professional treachery and personal dishonor, and if the profession should abrogate the idea of privileges between attorney and client the relation would become in the sight of the community a legal mockery and a pitfall. Counsel concluded his arraignment of Tracy by expressing his regret that he had been compelled to say anything on that head.

THE PERORATION.

In a mild, emotional voice, and in the deep silence of the court room, Mr. Beach then proceeded to read his peroration, which was eloquent and impressive. This done he turned to the Court and paid a few well deserved compliments to His Honor. Compliments of an appropriate character were likewise paid to his associates and his adversaries, and, in touching language, he referred to the transcendant qualities of the defendant, which, however, could not save him from temptation and from falling. He then quoted Whittier's poem of "Ichabod" as applicable to the great but fallen preacher, and, with a few additional words, ended his great address, and sat down amid suppressed applause.

REQUESTS TO CHARGE.

Mr. Abbott then stood up and said that in regard to certain authorities quoted by the plaintiff's counsel he wished to offer a series of requests to charge. Abbott is a tall, gaunt man, as dry as a baked chip, and when he began to quote references, Smith against Smith, Jones against Jones, &c., directly on the heels of the eloquent peroration made by Mr. Beach, the contrast was painfully jarring. Sam Morris could stand it no longer, and called on His Honor to extinguish Mr. Abbott, as he was proceeding to argue when he had no right to do so. Mr. Beach next stood up and protested against allowing Mr. Abbott to proceed in the way he was going. The Judge, however, was kindly disposed toward Mr. Abbott, and let him go on, but insisted he should not argue, but simply state his requests to charge. Much time was consumed in this dull work, but the audience patiently remained.

THE LAST HALF HOUR.

The usual time for adjournment had come and had passed, but Mr. Abbott, of defendant's counse still proceeded. As often as the lawyers for the plaintiff stood up and objected they took their seats under the echoes of Mr. Abbott's voice, as he intonated the familiar words, "Proposition Twenty-so-and-so." Mr. Beach writhed uneasily in his chair, and when ex-Judge Morris could endure the agony no longer he arose to suggest that, as the quantity of manuscript before his opponent was large, an adjournment had better be had, in order that another day could be given to the defence. Mr. Beach exclaimed:—"Mr. Abbott had better go on if he can finish in a reasonable time." And so the indomitable reader of citations and technicalities continued. Above the hum of the audience rose a clear and not over confident voice, heard in the momentarily more familiar words, "Proposition forty-so-and-so." Again Mr. Beach sprung to his feet and exclaimed, "Your Honor, this is an argument!" and the calm and sphinx-like Judge replied, "It certainly is." The lawyers looked on aghast. The audience marvelled among themselves. Mr. Evarts folded his arms, shut his eyes and pretended to be oblivious of the tempest brewing over his head. Mr. Shearman was a faithful coadjutor of his junior and encouraged him to read on and on and on. Now he sought out and found a stray sheet of the printed matter, which Mr. Abbott read. Now he whispered a word of caution or of inspiration to his young colleague. Mr. Beach mopped his face with his handkerchief. The defendant listened attentively; the plaintiff pretended not to hear. But, above all this "guying" of the performance the voice of the reader was heard in the words, "Proposition fifty-odd."

THE JUDGE TO THE RESCUE.

As Mr. Abbott proceeded the quotations from the rulings of Supreme Court judges became more copious, and the references to law reports more numerous, until Judge Neilson interrupted the reader with the remark:—"Give me the references only; omit the rulings in former cases." This acted as a wholesome check upon the counsel, and after an apology the reading proceeded smoothly until the end. Mr. Abbott sat down about ten minutes after four. The hum which had gone around the court room at the end of Mr. Beach's remarks was not so pronounced. The effect of the reading of the "requests to charge" had not been favorable to the defendant throughout the court room. Even the most impartial seemed to look upon Mr. Abbott's elaborate effort as a sort of special plea.

THE PROCEEDINGS.

At the sitting of the Court Mr. Evarts said:—If Your Honor please, in pursuance of Your Honor's suggestion made yesterday in regard to requests to charge, we have revised the list that we have prepared, and though we shall find it necessary, as we think, to present some of them before Your Honor's charge is given, we shall reserve those which we think can be suitably reserved. Your Honor is aware that our learned friend has presented some authorities, and we shall present one or two. Mr. Abbott will present them to Your Honor.

The Chief Justice—Do not let anything I have said be any restraint upon you in the matter.

MR. BEACH'S ADDRESS.

Mr. Beach resumed his address as follows:—You will see from the protracted length of this case and the multitude of matters that were to be examined the propriety of my relying on the various quotations I have made from the published works of Mr. Beecher, upon extracts furnished at my desire by friends to whom I have applied. It has not been possible for me personally to verify all of them, although many of them I have examined. The statement I made in regard to the invitation which was extended by Mr. Beecher to other persons to unite with Plymouth church in commemoration of the Lord's Supper, was given to you from a memorandum furnished to me by another orthodox clergyman, whose name it is not necessary to mention, in which he specified some of the invitations usually as given by Mr. Beecher, and then generalized or paraphrased those invitations in the language which I gave to you, and inadvertently, I suppose, attached to that paraphrase quotation marks, and I was led, therefore, to suppose that that was the precise language used by Mr. Beecher. It appears, on a closer examination, that the actual invitation given by Mr. Beecher used at the close of a sermon found in the sixth series of his published works on page 365 is in the following words:—"All those who love the Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity and truth, whether they belong to any Church or not, are invited to tarry," and at the close of a sermon in the tenth series at page 17, the invitation is qualified with the addition, "without regard to their Church connections or special beliefs," and, therefore, the gentleman who furnished me the statement from which I spoke giving what he supposed was the essence and conclusion to be derived from those invitations, used the expression, "Quakers, Mormons, Baptists, or anybody else, &c." The invitation was in principle just what my informant concluded it to be; it was an invitation to all professing to love the Lord Jesus Christ, without regard to their church connections, that is, whether they were members or not of any church organization, and without regard to their special beliefs, no matter what might be the character of those beliefs. All that they had to do to entitle them to communion and fellowship with Plymouth church was to profess love of the Lord Jesus Christ. Now you are aware that it is the custom of all or nearly all churches and ministers to invite the members of other churches. I have very frequently heard the addition, "in good standing with other churches to partake of communion." Mr. Beecher's habit, on the contrary, is to invite without regard to their church connections or to their special beliefs. But it was not a frequent error, and you may think it a substantial error. Quite an unconscious one in attributing to Mr. Beecher the precise language I did.

SHEARMAN TO THE RESCUE.

Mr. Shearman—If your Honor please, I desire at this point to say a few words, and I desire to call the attention of my learned friend to these errors and some others which he has made.

Mr. Beach—That will not do.

Mr. Shearman—I rise to object to any further quotations from the letters and sermons of Mr. Beecher, as they have not been put in evidence, and we on our part have not quoted anything from the works of Mr. Tilton, and our point now is that it is entirely out of order to quote any part of Mr. Beecher's speeches or sermons, as they have not been put in evidence. My learned friend assumed to make a correction but I must say that he is not sufficiently up in his argument, and I shall have to make many other corrections.

Judge Neilson—I think the counsel can in his argument to the jury use any letters or any papers, they are not part of the evidence, but used in illustration.

Mr. Shearman—I think it is the most extraordinary practice I have heard of.

Mr. Evarts—Your Honor may remember that in regard to certain writings of Mr. Tilton, his counsel objected to his being examined as to his meaning, and held that the writings of parties who had the vocation of writers, preachers or teachers can be brought in as evidence of their own acts without being objected to. Now, Mr. Beecher's published sermons are in a certain sense literary property, but, nevertheless, we object to the allegation of matters outside as they are supposed to be, and the counsel will not bring them unless they are supposed to have weight.

Mr. Beach—Both of my learned friends indulged in very great license in their reference to matters outside of the evidence, and in one or two instances introduced the writings which were not in evidence. But if Your Honor will remember this, that during the whole of the address of my learned friend, every one remembers the principles and motives which were attributed to Mr. Beecher, which were not shown by anything in this cause, and could not be presumed to come to the knowledge of my learned friends except from a knowledge of the published life and writings of Mr. Beecher, and I supposed they got that knowledge of their client from that source, and on that subject I must take his and their own declarations. And I make them, sir—these quotations—not as evidence in this case, but as argumentative illustrations of the contrary theory which is presented upon the part of the plaintiff.

SHEARMAN OBJECTS.

Mr. Shearman—Well, if Your Honor please, I respectfully insist upon our objection to this course. I have taken pains to examine these citations, so far as opportunity was given to me, and in every case I have found these quotations to be incorrect.

Mr. Beach—That is a statement. One moment, sir. I object to the gentleman interrupting me.

Mr. Shearman—I am rising to a question of law——

Judge Neilson—You are at liberty, Mr. Shearman, after Mr. Beach's argument is closed, and I will be happy to hear you.

Mr. Shearman—I am objecting to anything further in this line; on the ground that the statements are entirely incorrect and justify the strict enforcement of the rule. We respectfully object to any further reading of statements on the ground that it is not permitted and on the practical ground that they are entirely incorrect, as I have found.

Judge Neilson—Of course any paper, book, newspaper or letter can only be read by way of illustration in argument, only in extracts from a paper, book and publication of a party to a suit there is great danger that the jury will confound them with evidence.

Mr. Morris—They are only objecting to their own medicine; that is all. (Laughter.)

Mr. Beach—When the gentleman assumes to say that the quotations I have made from the sermons of Mr. Beecher are in every instance incorrect and inaccurate, upon what authority he assumes to say it I am unable to conceive.

Mr. Shearman—In every instance I have examined.

Mr. Beach—Oh, in every instance you have examined. I don't know how much he has examined. These are the printed extracts from my argument, giving the several quotations made by me and the references to the sermons, books and the page from which each was taken, and I challenge the gentleman to show any error in either of the quotations, and this is at his service for it.

SHEARMAN ACCEPTS.

Mr. Shearman—I accept the challenge so far as the quotations given. The first is in reference to the invitation to communion.

Mr. Beach—That I have explained, and I object to the gentleman reading any quotation on the subject. My argument is not to be interrupted by a sort of interjected speech upon the part of the defendant. (Applause.)

Judge Neilson—Will the audience please keep still? The learned counsel misunderstood me. I said he will have an opportunity after your argument is closed, but the observation you made gave him the idea of going on now.

Mr. Beach—He may point out any error I have fallen into, any misquotation, but beyond this I object.

Mr. Shearman—If the gentleman allows me, then I propose to go on.

Mr. Beach—I propose that the gentleman shall do it properly and in order; that he shall not read long extracts from the sermons of Mr. Beecher. I do not intend that he shall read them. The question is whether anything that I have read from the sermons of Mr. Beecher is inaccurate and incorrect.

Judge Neilson—After you get through he can correct any error, but I cannot allow time to extend any quotation or introduce new sentences.

Mr. Shearman—What I want to know is whether the gentleman accepts the challenge now. (Laughter.)

Judge Neilson—No; wait until he gets through.

Mr. Shearman—Does the gentleman withdraw the challenge? (Prolonged laughter.)

Judge Neilson—Go on now.

Mr. Beach—I will stick to my challenge.

Mr. Shearman—What does Your Honor decide—will you allow me to accept the gentleman's challenge now?

Judge Neilson—I think the proper time is after he gets through.

SHEARMAN TO BE EXCUSED.

Mr. Shearman—Very good. Excuse me if I interrupt on another occasion. The gentleman, though, is reading matters not in evidence. We have in no single instance done that.

Mr. Fullerton—You read from Kinsella's paper an editorial.

Mr. Shearman—That was in evidence.

Mr. Morris—The editorial is not in evidence, Your Honor knows.

Judge Neilson—Oh, no; unless written by the plaintiff I could not receive it in evidence.

Mr. Shearman—The gentleman did not object to it being received in evidence, Your Honor.

Judge Neilson—Will you proceed with your argument?

Mr. Beach—Yes, sir; after I have asked Your Honor frankly to consider whether the intimation that you have given that Mr. Shearman or anybody else on the part of the defence may at the proper time object to these readings will justify a renewal of the argument on the part of the defence.

Judge Neilson—No, nor any further quotation.

Mr. Shearman—The correct quotation must be given to correct the incorrect.

Judge Neilson—No additional quotation.

Mr. Beach—Upon this question, as to the sacredness and solemnity attached by Mr. Beecher to the Lord's Supper, I read an extract from sermons in the second series from page 169.

Mr. Shearman—Your Honor will please note that we object to the reading of these extracts as not in evidence and entirely incompetent, and intended to affect the jury.

Judge Neilson—It will be understood that in such instances where he reads you have an exception. They are to be understood as not in evidence, but as a mere illustration.

Mr. Shearman—Note exception.

MR. BEECHER'S IDEA OF THE LORD'S SUPPER.

Counsel then read an extract from one of Mr. Beecher's sermons, as follows:—"The Lord's Supper, if it be administered by a pope, is good enough; if it be administered by a cardinal is good enough; if it be administered by a priest or minister of God is good enough; if it be administered by a father in the family is good enough, and if there is no one else to administer it and you administer it to yourself it is just as good." I understand this sacrament of the communion to be in commemoration of the last supper between Christ and His disciples, at which He broke bread, presented it to them, saying, "This is my body," and poured out the wine, saying, "This is my blood." That it symbolizes the sacrifice of Christ's body and His blood offered for the redemption of mankind, and that it derives all its holiness and whatever of feeling character or strengthening character it may possess from the fact that it was administered by God Himself, and in later days was administered by His disciples and by those who succeeded them, whether in direct or apostolic succession or any in the ministry of the Gospel. And this idea that any man may administer the Lord's Supper deprives it of all its holy and sacramental character and influence. You have but to sit down at your breakfast table and place the food before you and declare it Christ's body and blood, and you are in sacramental communion with Christ, eating the symbols of His body and blood. That is not the orthodox idea of that sacrament; it is a desecration of that sacrament. But enough upon that subject. As an illustration, perhaps practically, of the course of worship and communion in Plymouth church, it may be sufficient to say that Oliver Johnson, in all the moods and tenses of his belief and life, is yet considered a satisfactory communicant at Plymouth church.

Counsel then proceeded at great length to comment on the doctrines put forward by Mr. Beecher in regard to miracles, his ideas of a future life and the abolition of hell, the creation of the world, Darwinism and evolution, and read extracts from the defendant's sermons to substantiate his argument.

MR. BEECHER'S IDEA OF THE PULPIT.

Mr. Beecher says, in the first volume of sermons, page 406:—

"It has been said that the pulpit ought not to be turned into a lyceum for the discussion of customs and policies and such like topics. Anything that is right to talk about at all is right to talk about in the pulpit."

Well, the church is not, then, that holy and sacred temple, isolated from the practices and the thoughts and the discussions of the world, dedicated to the worship of the Master, to holy reflection, to serious thought and self-examination and discipline. It is the place where every worldly topic may be considered and treated appropriately to the nature of the particular subject. It is not Christ, God, man's sinfulness, man's redemption and repentance, faith, nay, it is all the vast variety of selfish, mercenary, temporary topics which agitate society and which may properly be introduced into the pulpit and discussed by the announced minister of God. And I may be permitted to say, without offence, that the practice of Mr. Beecher fully accorded with his theory. And the result which you would expect to follow in the desecration of God's sanctuary has followed in Plymouth church. It is not an orderly, spirit-broken, prayerful worship; it is not a service which holds up Christ and Him crucified, but it is a performance which exhibits Beecher and him glorified. Throughout all his sermons are scattered the minutes of noisy applause and laughter. In a report of Mr. Beecher's sermon of June 14 there were eighteen notices of laughter during the delivery of his sermon.

Mr. Fullerton—Laughter and applause.

Mr. Beach—Yes, laughter and applause.

Mr. Shearman—There was not any applause.

SHEARMAN AS A CLAPPER.

Mr. Beach—Why, of course, my friend Shearman was there and he was the loudest clapper of them in the congregation. (Great laughter.)

Judge Neilson—Gentlemen, you must keep silent.

Mr. Beach—Now, it is the easiest thing in the world for Mr. Beecher to excite any passion or emotion of our nature, no matter what it is. He may make himself the feeling and impressive teacher of the great doctrines and truths of our religion. He may make himself the most perfect humorist and wit and comedian. All the varieties of human nature are open to his touch, and he guides them with a masterly hand, but it is a matter of somewhat serious consideration whether this exhibition of the various characteristics of a great man, inducing to amusement and frivolity in the church of God rather than to the glorification of that reverence and worship which belongs to that sacred place, are appropriate to a character so great and magnificent as he is represented to be. Well, I have been furnished with a few of the quaint and extravagant expressions of Mr. Beecher in his pulpit, perhaps not worthy of particular notice, but one or two of them in his "Life Thoughts" I will give. He says:—"I could have killed old Jeremiah if I could have got at his ribs." And then, at page 103, he says:—"I find that men overeat their prayers." This is in the seventh series of his sermons:—"I pray on the principle that wine knocks the cork out of a bottle." (Laughter.) That is a good principle. "It is praying from the heart, the wine of the spirit started the cork and opened the mouth." Well, in his "Life Thoughts," at page 241, he thinks "The elect are whosoever will and the non-elect whosoever won't." (Laughter.) Well, I think there is rather too much flippancy, that it is rather too frivolous for the consideration of the great and interesting topic of election. Some of his forefathers believed in that doctrine. Some of the great lights of Christianity believed in it. Of course I am not competent to enter into a theological discussion upon that subject, but I remember in my younger and better days to have heard that doctrine taught by men who were revered as the chosen leaders and teachers of Christianity.

Here the counsel read extracts, as already alluded to, from Mr. Beecher's sermon, published in a newspaper, on the prodigal son, in which Mr. Beecher is represented as taking sides with the prodigal son as against his brother, who "was too stingy to get drunk and too cautious to sin lasciviously."

SHEARMAN'S ASSAULT-AT-ARMS.

Mr. Shearman—What page do you read from?

Mr. Beach—It is from your own notes.

Mr. Shearman—No, sir; it is not.

Mr. Beach—Every word that I have read is a quotation of Mr. Beecher's. Mr. Beecher's sermons are reported in a newspaper by a regular reporter.

Mr. Shearman—If Your Honor please, I protest against this.

Mr. Beach—They have said it in this court.

Mr. Shearman—This is an anonymous newspaper, not even a newspaper published in New York, very likely incorrect, and the learned gentleman did add a great many of his own remarks, without making any distinction.

Judge Neilson—We have no assurance of that.

Mr. Beach—If this Court and jury are so unintelligent that when I read from a newspaper they cannot distinguish between a quotation and a comment, why, I would recommend Mr. Shearman to act as an interpreter.

Judge Neilson—The jury can distinguish.

Mr. Shearman—It is impossible for us to distinguish his quotations from his comments.

Judge Neilson—It is but a mere matter of illustration.

Mr. Shearman—I submit that it is utterly unprecedented to allow matters of illustration in the way of quotations from a defendant's speeches, intended to prejudice him before the jury and to scandalize him before the public, which are for the purposes of this trial, and I respectfully except.

Judge Neilson—I think it admissible as mere argument if counsel see fit to use it so.

Mr. Beach—When Mr. Beecher was eulogized as the great preacher of the time, as the orthodox teacher of the pulpit, and held up as pure and stainless and true, I supposed that was all addressed to the outside public. I supposed it was to that outside jury to which my friend Porter referred.

Mr. Shearman—Your Honor, permit me one word. Mr. Evarts in his examination of Mr. Beecher inquired fully into the course of his life, and no one will find in the speech of Judge Porter or Mr. Evarts one word, I will undertake to say, certainly not one entire sentence founded on the assumption of any fact not stated in the evidence, and that our opponents were not permitted freely to cross-examine him upon, and here we are confronted by extracts from newspapers—extracts, doubtless fictions——

Mr. Beach—That is not true.

SHEARMAN AS AN UNDERTAKER.

Mr. Shearman—It is true. I will undertake that of three there is not one of which he is the acknowledged author. That it is an entire perversion of Mr. Beecher's statements; that they impute language to Mr. Beecher that he never uttered. They are quotations from sermons which I listened to, and I know that he did not use that language. It does not give a correct idea of what Mr. Beecher said any more than if I were to say of Apostle Paul that he said, "God be thanked that you are the servants of sin." Is it justice to the Apostle to make that quotation and to let it stand there detached from its connection?

Judge Neilson—We have no assurance, of course, that these reports are the discourse referred to; we don't know that, still I think they may be used as illustrations in argument. That it is proper to help and fortify an argument by reading from a newspaper something putting the idea more forcible, whether it be from one source or another, from "Adam Smith" or the Edinburgh Review. The jury are to regard it as a mere illustration which at the bottom may be correct or otherwise.

Mr. Beach—We had the announcement from the other side that Mr. Beecher's sermons were weekly gathered up and reported in all the leading papers of the country, and it is a fact that we know independent of their declarations. And it will be an astonishment to a great many, sir, when our learned friends have declared that the weekly thoughts and teachings of Mr. Beecher, in their blessed influence, are spread all over the world; it will be an astonishment to many to know that they are not correct representations of his thoughts and teachings; it will be a gratification to many, sir, to believe that the denial is true.

Judge Neilson—Mr. Beach, your observation yourself and your own experiences also will lead you to admit that you are not always correctly quoted yourself; and yet you are always remarkably clear in your utterances. There have been instances where you have not been correctly reported, and indeed I have one before me now.

Mr. Beach—That is a consequence of the natural imperfection of things. I have got to be judged by the manner in which I am reported; and when the reports of Mr. Beecher come out in this authorized form and are circulated as his sermons, we are to suppose, under the ordinary correction of the author, when he himself has sworn that he has published thirty volumes of sermons, or what not, I think I am justified, sir, in making extracts from that authentic and authorized publication. Coming from that source they would likely be correct. Almost every quotation I have made has been made from these books.

MR. BEECHER AS A PREACHER OF THE GOSPEL.

Well, gentlemen, in a quiet way, let us by way of recapitulation, see what is the attitude of Mr. Beecher as a preacher of the Gospel and how well he deserves the encomium either as the greatest man in the world, as pronounced by Mr. Wilkeson, or as the leading pulpit orator of the day, as represented by his counsel, and what great principle of the fundamental doctrines of orthodoxy has not Mr. Beecher in some way assailed, either impeached and discarded or tried to change in its influence and character. He has denied, in the first place, the condition of our first parents, the integrity and purity of their original creation. He has placed them at the lowest point of animal existence, abolishing the whole idea of original sin and the fall of man, and substituted the Darwinian doctrine of evolution—no connection between the earlier intelligence and our own. He has denied the blood of the atonement, in defiance of the declaration of Scripture that without the shedding of blood there is no remission. He has secularized the Christian Church. Instead of a divine institution, where Christ meets His children and exercises the influence of His holy spirit, through its ministrations, it is a mere institution of the world, a mere corporate institution, secular in its character, useful in its office and bearing about it none of the odor of sanctity. It is like your theatres, your railroads, your committee rooms or any other of the gatherings of men in the ordinary pursuits of their life, and he has degraded the highest and most exalted office in life, the ministry of the Church, by declaring that no qualification is necessary to it more than belongs to a lawyer or an engineer, no education or authority from Christ, no embassadorship from heaven, no anointing [illegible], spiritual or otherwise, from the Father, but every man, moved by the impulse may assume the sacred character and dignity of a teacher of the Gospel. He treats with derision and renounces the sacraments of religion, baptism and the Lord's Supper, he rejects the teachings of all the great leaders of the orthodox faith in all past time, and the honored creed of his own denomination he denounces as wicked—flagitious. He practically does away with the wrath to come, with a threatened hell, with the denounced vengeance of God upon the sinner. He detracts from the heinousness of sin, rejecting the atonement, the sacrifice of Christ, he then maintains by some process of God's mercy, men ultimately will be redeemed and saved. And I think with a practically equal injurious influence upon the world, he desecrates the temple of his God; he has made it the scene of witticisms and jests, humor and buffoonery, which have made it more like to a theatre than to a church.

AN OUTLINE OF THE STORY.

It is not wonderful when we consider the character of the man. Discarding, gentlemen, for one moment, all the evidence in this case, except Mr. Beecher's, with our knowledge of his character and divesting that evidence of all its figures and descriptions by a close and rigid analysis, reducing it to its elements and judging from that of the probability of his offence, what would be the conclusion of practical, worldly common sense. His representation, his theory of this whole case is that upon a certain day he was approached by an inmate of Mr. Tilton's house, Bessie Turner, who made foul revelations to him concerning the personal character of Mr. Tilton, who made distressing communications to him in regard to the condition of Mr. Tilton's household. These representations concerned a man who had been a life long friend of Mr. Beecher, a man whom in his boyhood Mr. Beecher loved, and in whom those early years had detected the elements of that intellectual and moral character which he saw would raise him to the moral and intellectual elevation he afterward obtained, and from that time onward these two men had lived in the closest bonds of friendship and intimacy. They resided in the same city. Day by day they saw each other, and yet Henry Ward Beecher tells you that when these discrediting stories came to his ear, without any consultation with the friend who was accused, without appealing to him whom he had loved and trusted for years, as to the truth of the accusation, without any effort at kindly remonstrance, if, on inquiry, there was foundation, forgetting all the duties of friendship and manhood, Henry Ward Beecher at once advises, as he says, a separation. Then, after an interval, comes the charge made by this same friend against Mr. Beecher—a charge of unchristian and inhuman treatment of the wife of that friend; he learns, as he says, and believes that that charge was extorted from the wife by the importunity and the scheming violence of the husband. And yet Mr. Beecher, in a public card in his paper, eulogizes this conspirator and ruffian against his wife's honor and peace. For three years he praises him, in his written words he commends him for his kind and genial and generous treatment, this man who, as Mr. Beecher affects to believe, had committed not only this wrong against him by an atrocious charge and had made his wife the accomplice of the charge, and then through the entreaties and the persuasive explanations of Mr. Moulton alone he comes to the conclusion that he had done all wrong, that he ought not to have advised separation or advised Bowen. He suddenly makes up his mind that he has won, unconsciously, the affections of Mrs. Tilton, and for three long years he is surrounded by this horror of a great darkness, and lives upon the ragged edge of despair and remorse; and during it all he never makes a single inquiry to learn whether it be true or not that he has won the affections of the wife, or that he has thereby introduced dissension and discord and unhappiness into the household of his friend. In constant communication with the parties, free to learn from Mr. Tilton whether or not his suspicion, belief, were true, he yet lingers in these protracted agonies for three years. But take that story, even in its imperfect outlines as I have given it, and is it credible; does it conform to the ordinary rules of human actions, to the instincts of our nature? We judge this man as we should judge ourselves, our fellow men generally, by the probability of this theory, and the statements of his defence, are they acceptable to the intelligence of this jury? I submit to you in themselves they are intrinsically faulty and incredible. It is on this theory alone Mr. Beecher founds his defence, and if it fails he falls; and if you bring it to the test of your ordinary reason and judgment it seems to me you cannot fail to detect this fallacy and sophistry, and see in it a necessitous creation of a great and ingenious mind, driven to desperation and despair.

At this stage the Court took the usual recess.

AFTER THE RECESS.

The court room was filled in every corner on the reassembling after recess. Beach at last had indicated his intention to wind up on the final adjournment for the day. The absence of Judge Fullerton was explained, when Beach stood up to resume his speech, and launched out into a fierce and forcible arraignment of General Tracy. It was not quite clear what this had to do with the charge against Beecher, but ex-Judges Fullerton and Morris had each an animus to gratify against Tracy, and Beach was saddled with the task. Tracy sat quietly in the rear of Beach, his arms folded and his whole attention given to the address impeaching him with "professional treachery and personal dishonor." The audience felt no particular interest in the harangue. "Tracy acted in a very sinister way in drawing Tilton's thunder, promising to stand by him, and then going over to the Beecher side." It was about three o'clock when Mr. Beecher entered the court room. He stood just inside the entrance for upward of ten minutes, until, being recognized by the wonderful ushers, Murray and Caldwell, he was escorted to a seat next assistant pastor Halliday.

Mr. Beach resumed—I have but one more duty to perform in this case, and it is not the least of the many disagreeable obligations which my position has imposed upon me. I am to speak of a professional brother, and there is no service which a lawyer renders in the discharge of the obligations of his profession more repulsive and unpleasant than that. The profession of the law, I think, is peculiar in some of its features of association, and, I think, superior to all other classes of men and professions. There is none of the mean spirit of envy and jealousy, there is none of the carping and backbiting which too often disfigure the characters of other professions. We acknowledge the attainments and the merits of our fellows. We cheerfully accord to the great leaders of our profession their well earned and deserved position. Nobody disputes the well founded and meritorious claims of my learned adversaries. No man feels any humiliation when he witnesses a great professional effort; but every lawyer rather feels pride, and cheerfully accords the deserved approbation. All of us with cheerful accord acknowledge, for illustration, Mr. Charles O'Conor as the leader of our profession, its great master and exemplar.

ATTACKING TRACY.

For Mr. Benjamin F. Tracy I have no feeling but that of the utmost kindness, and I speak nothing in regard to his duty and connection with this case from any unfriendliness, or from any desire to injure his feelings, and if Mr. Tracy had been content with the simple advocacy of the cause of his present client I should not have deemed it within the line of my duty to advert at all to his position, because it was not necessary to the proper, fearless discussion of the cause I represent. But whatever his professional taste and principle may have led him to do with reference to his double obligation to the parties to this case was material, and when Mr. Tracy chooses to place himself on the witness stand and assail the witnesses who have been produced on the part of my client, and contradict inevitably and unavoidably three of those witnesses, I have no choice—I must examine his pretensions as a witness, and, in that connection, his attitude to this case as a lawyer. I beg leave, further, to premise that the relations between that gentleman and myself have been entirely cordial, and nothing that has happened or shall happen in this case will interrupt, on my part, that friendliness of sentiment. I think he has erred. I think he has committed a personal and a professional error; but I know he has done it under high sanction; and certainly will not diminish the feeling I have hitherto entertained for that gentleman; and I trust all that I shall say will not impair the sentiments of that gentleman toward myself, because he must know that my utterances are extorted by my position. I repeat, that Mr. Tracy offers himself as a witness in this case, in direct and unavoidable contradiction upon a material issue in the case to three witnesses—namely, Mr. Tilton, Mr. Moulton and Franklin Woodruff. Whatever you say or think in regard to Mr. Tilton or Mr. Moulton, I think I may point to the character and reputation of Franklin Woodruff as an entirely unassailable and estimable gentleman, occupying a position in this community, not only as one of those honorable and enterprising merchants so highly lauded by my friend Mr. Porter, but as a gentleman of public spirit, of personal purity and morality, of respectability of station and of conduct which exalts him above all unkindly criticism. Mr. Tracy, after these three witnesses had testified that Theodore Tilton, in the interview with him, did charge the offence of adultery against Mr. Beecher—after these three witnesses had deliberately and directly testified that Mr. Tracy had counselled under the circumstances a policy of silence and falsehood, chooses to become a witness in contradiction of their statement. The connection of Mr. Tracy with all this transaction, in its irregular beginning and its more methodized litigation, is not, it seems to me, very complimentary. He is a facile and performing several parts in this drama, and performing all of them with earnest zeal and judgment. He is first the chosen friend and counsellor, through Mr. Moulton, of Theodore Tilton. He meets the two in company with their friend Woodruff as an adviser upon a question of very great importance to Mr. Tilton, and he receives from them a full and free communication of all their secrets relating to that particular transaction. There was some scruple about the confidence which they bestowed upon Mr. Tracy. Theodore Tilton was unwilling that the facts affecting the character of his wife and family, and disclosing the full nature of the association between Mr. Beecher and them should be communicated to a third party—to Mr. Tracy. And with that prudence which generally characterized Mr. Tilton in regard to his resolutions concerning this affair, he exacted from Mr. Tracy his pledge of word and honor that he would not, under any circumstances, thereafter become the counsel of Henry Ward Beecher in antagonism to Theodore Tilton. Mr. Tracy does not deny the pledge, either in spirit or in terms; and yet we see him next, after having possessed himself of the secrets of Mr. Tilton and received his views and declarations in regard to this lamentable affair under this pledge—he is next seen in close consultation with Mr. Beecher and the other advisers in regard to the organization of a committee to judge between Henry Ward Beecher and Theodore Tilton; and after organizing that committee he appears as the counsel opposed to the interests of Mr Tilton before that body, and as the leading and controlling spirit of its proceedings. Then he appears in this action, active, indefatigable, malignant: engaging in the cross-examination of witnesses, bearing his full part and responsibility in the discharge of professional duty. Then as the deliberate sponsor of the opening address for the defendant in this case, full of animosity, of denunciation of untruth, representing his former friends and confidants in the most odious of all lights, and in the most severe and reprehensible language; and not content with this, when his master is overborne by three witnesses, by all the evidence to which I have from time to time alluded, in this case when the strength of this controversy bears with crushing power upon this defendant, Mr. Tracy leaps into the breach, or rather into the gulf, and sacrifices himself for the defence of his client. The question is, whether this position in its professional and moral aspects, justifies the hope which alone could occasion it, that the word of Mr. Tracy, like the word of Henry Ward Beecher, is to overbear the honor, the oath and the testimony of three men equally credible as themselves, and to whom honor, reputation and fame are as dear as they are to Mr. Tracy or Mr. Beecher. My learned friends announced that it was at the suggestion, and with their approval, that this course was pursued by Mr. Tracy. Both of these gentlemen know that in the ranks of professional or of social life there are no two gentlemen to whom my respectful affection is more freely and liberally tendered than to them; but I differ with them. I differ with them in regard to the question of personal and professional propriety and of personal honor and manliness. And it is to me a matter of great pain and surprise that they should have approved or counselled such an exhibition of what I conceive professional treachery and personal dishonor. I should not have disagreed with gentlemen so eminent and respected upon my own idea of right, but I had been instructed for long years that the life and the honor of our profession consisted in its fidelity to its cause and its client; I had been taught to believe the pledge of a man and a gentleman was to be redeemed under all conceivable circumstances; and I had been taught by the elements as well as by the judicature of our profession, that no lawyer who, under the privilege attaching to the relation of attorney and client, had received the communication of secrets of that client, could in law or in justice, without the permission of that client, make a disclosure of them: that the power of the law which overreaches and treads down mere sentiments and sympathies, and looks only to the administration of justice according to its known principles; that the law could not extract from the honor of the profession the secrets of the client.

A VERSATILE CHARACTER,

THE AUTHORITIES.

Mr. Beach then read authorities to show that a lawyer is not presumed to be both advocate and witness for his client in the same cause:—"The characters of the advocate and the witness should be zealously kept apart." "Such a course of proceeding is not consistent with the due administration of justice." Chief Justice Campbell expresses disapprobation in his decision of a party acting as advocate and witness:—"It is revolting to the minds of the jury, and will generally be injurious to those who present it."

In those States where the law does not extend to the limit of the English practice, so far as it grants new trials for an offence of that character, the practice is similarly condemned, and there is no precedent to be found where a lawyer was allowed to testify in a case as to a material question at issue, and was continued, after his testifying, in connection with the case, that has ever met with the approval of the Court. There are exceptions it is true, but in such a case it may be regarded that such an advocate should at once sever his connection with the case. "It was the practice to receive such testimony in North Carolina, but in most cases it has been accompanied by the surrender by the attorney of his briefs in the case." Another authority cited said, "It degrades the character of the Bar and we think that the evil will work its own cure." This is the judgment of the courts upon such exhibitions as we have had from Mr. Tracy. Mr. Tracy was not simply the advocate of Mr. Beecher, and a witness in his behalf, but he had given his pledge, under circumstances to which I have referred, that he would occupy no such position. The circumstances are more deplorably characterized by the fact that he was pursuing in opposition to that pledge, the assurance under which he received from Mr. Tilton his confidences. You will remember that Mr. Tracy testified that he was still connected with this case and with Mr. Beecher, and that he had not thought it necessary for him to retire from it, and that he subsequently acted, and is still acting, as counsel in this case. What is the excuse? Mr. Tracy says:—"Mr Tilton, you have changed your ground and I am, therefore, released from those personal and professional obligations in which I held myself to you. Well, no gentleman of sound manly principle could uphold a lawyer in revealing the secrets of a case which he obtained on a positive pledge of fidelity to the cause. Is it true that Tilton did change his grounds? Three witnesses—Tilton, Moulton and Woodruff—all assert the express charge made by Tilton was that of adultery, of criminal intercourse in direct terms.

Mr. Shearman interrupted the counsel and disputed the correctness of the application of the evidence cited.

Mr. Beach read from Moulton's testimony in relation to what he told Mr. Beecher as to his interview with Mr. Tracy. Moulton says:—"I told him that I told Tracy the facts, that you had been guilty of sexual intercourse with Elizabeth R. Tilton, and that Tracy said, 'If that be true, then it must be concealed at all hazards;' * * * I told him of the consultation between Tracy, Woodruff and myself, and that at that interview I told Tracy the truth."

Mr. Shearman interrupted again, and said that, although Moulton in his direct examination gave that testimony, when Moulton and Tilton were recalled, after Mr. Tracy had testified, they did not contradict Mr. Tracy's denial of that conversation on that point.

Mr. Beach said that Moulton and Tilton were not examined on that point because it was not admissible to go into that question again. If that was not a clear statement of the statement of Moulton to Tracy then he was unable to understand it. Mr. Woodruff has sworn that, in the interview between Moulton, Tilton, Tracy and himself, Tracy was informed that the charge was adultery.

Mr. Shearman repeated his objection to the construction of the evidence, and Mr. Beach said "it is not necessary for you to repeat what you have so emphatically said so many times. If Mr. Tracy was employed by a man who was accused of manslaughter, and his client revealed to him all the circumstances of the crime, and another indictment for homicide was subsequently found against the client, would Mr. Tracy then feel at liberty to reveal what was confided to him by his client when under indictment for the lesser offence? Would he be entitled to appear against him?

Mr. Shearman again interrupted Mr. Beach, who said sharply, "Well, in the name of heaven, talk till you get tired." Mr. Shearman said he would like His Honor to hear him, but he objected to the audience interrupting him. At the interview spoken of Mr. Tracy represented Mr. Beecher, and it was upon that ground alone that the evidence was admitted.

Mr. Beach (to Mr. Shearman)—Are you through now?

Mr. Tracy said to Tilton no matter about etiquette, but the communication you make to me will be sacred. He must meet this question, and it is a question which must be decided in the judgment of the profession and the community, or else the idea of privileged confidence between counsel and client is a legal mockery and a legal pitfall, and the profession will and ought to become a byword and a scorn. The present case which he espouses is but the ghost of the former case.

The counsel then read the resolution of the Bar against changing sides in an issue at law.

THE PERORATION.

Mr. Beach then said:—I leave that part of the subject, and only regret that I had to refer to it. That subject will be left to the consideration of others. My argument is now finished. All these disagreeable subjects are passed, and I rejoice that I am freed from them. We have communed for a long time together on great themes associated with the highest interests of humanity, truth, morality; all the great topics which stir humanity have mingled with our discussion. If anything can exalt us to a nobler conception of the beauties of truth it is a scene like this, so full of great responsibility. I have felt my inability worthily to meet the duties of my position in the face of adversaries so cunning of fence and so able; but the race is not always to the swift and the battle to the strong. I have little faith in my own skill, but I have an infinite trust in that justice which rules the whole world and notes the fall of every sparrow. On the great seal of your city is the motto, "Right makes might," and upon any day of public celebration it shines on the flag which is flung out from the dome of your City Hall. It is the motto which encourages and strengthens weakness in its contest with arrogance and power. It is the sentiment which has sustained my client in all the difficulties and discouragements of this trial, and which will sustain and eventually, I trust, redeem him, because it bears the promise of Him whose words shall never fail. Wearied and worn with this trial, I yet part from you with respectful regret. Our long association, bringing us into intimacy, impresses me with kindly sentiments and interest for each one of you. We have stood before this community animated by a common object—seeking after the right in honest sincerity and without distemper—free from the turbulent influence, anxieties and sympathies of an excited people—actuated by a desire to uphold the strong pillars of the temple of truth and honesty and to preserve the altar of God from efforts aimed at its ruin. The struggle this day is between the law and a great character and a great church. If the latter triumph and the law is trodden down, woe unto him who calleth good evil and evil good.

TRIBUTE TO JUDGE NEILSON.

May it please Your Honor, it needs not that I should express the common sentiment of my associates and myself as we recall the indulgent dignity and fearless bearing with which you have guided us through the tangled mazes of this trial. You can receive no nobler tribute than that offered by our adversaries. Fighting every step of the case, sprinkling the record all over with exceptions, they have acknowledged the entire accuracy of your numerous decisions. You have the gratification to know that you have worked no injustice to this defendant. Indulge the hope that the feeling of regard with which you have honored me will, as will my own warm feelings toward yourself, grow and increase after the close of these toilsome and pleasant days. I cannot close without expressing my grateful thanks to my noble friends and associates. If any merit has attended my efforts it is due to their sagacity and wise prompting. Posting me in the front of the battle, they have still stood as its leaders. It has been a great loss to us that, by unavoidable circumstances, my friend General Pryor has been so much away from the case. If he has not struck so many blows in the field he has been the wisdom of our cabinet. Deeply are we all indebted to his ready and large learning and judicious counsel. You will credit me when I declare that the duty I have performed has been unwelcome and painful. I have not spoken aught in malice. I leave this case without the slightest asperity of feeling toward any one; filled with unaffected admiration of the transcendent qualities of my distinguished antagonists. No one admires more largely than myself the magnificent genius of this defendant. Rich as he is in mental endowments, prodigal as his labors have been, they cannot shelter him from the punishment of his offence against the law. Genius as lofty as his could not save Lord Bacon. He sinned and fell, and upon him history has written the epitaph:—

The wisest, greatest, meanest of mankind.

Toward great men in disgrace like this who fall Whittier, New England's gifted poet, writes in his poem "Ichabod":—

So fallen! so lost! the light withdrawn
 Which once he wore!
The glory from his gray hairs gone
 Forevermore!

Revile him not—the Tempter hath
 A snare for all;
And pitying tears, not scorn and wrath,
 Befit his fall!

O, dumb be passion's stormy rage,
 When he who might
Have lifted up and led his age
 Falls back in night.

Scorn! would the angels laugh, to mark
 A bright soul driven,
Fiend-goaded down the endless dark,
 From hope and heaven?

Let not the land once proud of him
 Insult him now,
Nor brand with deeper shame his dim,
 Dishonored brow.

But let its humbled sons, instead,
 From sea to lake,
A long lament, as for the dead,
 In sadness make.

Of all we loved and honored, nought
 Save power remains—
A fallen angel's pride of thought,
 Still strong in chains.

All else is gone; from those great eyes
 The soul has fled;
When faith is lost, when honor dies,
 The man is dead!

Then pay the reverence of old days
 To his dead frame;
Walk backward, with averted gaze,
 And hide the shame!

I will now submit this case to you in the sublime language of the great orator who sleeps in his grave at Marshfield. Mr. Beach then read a portion of one of Mr. Webster's orations before a jury, which admonished jurors to do their whole duty and impressed upon them the responsibilities of their position. Mr. Beach closed his address amid applause.

REQUESTS TO CHARGE.

Mr. Abbott—If Your Honor please, as we intimated we would have some requests to charge, we now desire to introduce them in behalf of the defence.

Mr. Beach—We have no requests to make, Your Honor.

Mr. Abbott said that, in regard to the question raised as to the propriety of counsel testifying in behalf of his client, there may be cases where it becomes a duty and a necessity for him to do so. There are several authorities in this State wherein a counsel is competent to testify. There was a clear necessity for his so doing in this case.

Mr. Abbott then proceeded to read the following requests, when Mr. Morris interrupted, saying that he understood that the papers were to be handed up, and that argument at the close of the case was inadmissible. The Judge said he would hear them, and Mr. Abbott proceeded to read:—

POINTS SUBMITTED.

I.

Irrespective of the question whether defendant committed adultery with plaintiff's wife, and without the jury's passing upon that question of fact, defendant is entitled to their verdict upon each of the following grounds:—

1. There is no evidence in support of plaintiff's allegation that by reason of any such adultery the plaintiff ever lost the comfort, society or assistance of his wife.

2. He continued to cohabit with his wife for years after the time of the alleged communication to him of the charge.

3. After such alleged communication, upon consideration of satisfactory explanations as to the alleged injury, and of protection of his wife, his children and himself, from a public contestation in respect to the same, the plaintiff and defendant concurred in the purpose of reconciliation and of the surrender of further controversy, and such settlement was in accord and satisfaction between the parties, and the plaintiff is thereby estopped from maintaining this action in repudiation of such settlement.

II.

Upon the whole evidence upon the principal issues in the cause, there is not sufficient proof to sustain a verdict for the plaintiff, and it is the duty of the jury to render a verdict for the defendant.

III.

The defendant is not required to prove his innocence; he is presumed innocent until his guilt is affirmatively established by a clear preponderance of evidence.

NOTE.—This principle is equally applicable in civil and criminal cases; and it makes no difference that the fact alleged is a matter peculiarly within defendant's knowledge. (Bentley vs. Bentley, 7 Cow., 701.)

Even a negative allegation, if it involves a charge of tort or of criminal conduct or neglect, must be clearly proved by the plaintiff. (People ex rel. Smith vs. Pease, 27 N. Y., 45: aff'g 30 Barb, 588.)

And the principle is peculiarly applicable to a charge of adultery. The defendant "is entitled to rest on a defect of proof, and is not bound to disprove the case." (King vs. King, 4 Scotch Sess., Cas., 2d Series, 582. Opinion by Lord Moncrieff.)

And even when the defendant in an action of crim. con. does not testify in his own behalf the omission does not raise any inference against him. (Lowe vs. Massey, 62 Illinois (Freem.), 47.)

Stated by Merrick, J., in Dalton vs. Dalton (Supreme Court of Massachusetts, 1857):—"It is not necessary that you should affirm the innocence of the respondent in order to entitle her to a verdict. It is not necessary that you should find affirmatively, upon the evidence that has been submitted to you, that she is not guilty, that she did not commit the act, so that you can affirm it as a truth proved. It is not necessary to go to that extent to entitle her to a verdict; but if, upon the whole evidence in the case, the state of your minds is this—a good deal of evidence to show that she might have been guilty, a good deal of probability that she might have been guilty, but an uncertainty whether she was guilty or not—then the libel is not proved; and though you cannot say, on the contrary, that you are fully satisfied and clear in your own minds that she is innocent, she is entitled to your verdict; that is, if the libellant has not proved that which it is essential for him to prove to entitle him to your verdict, then you must find for the respondent."

IV.

Plaintiff cannot recover unless the jury are satisfied, by affirmative evidence, that defendant actually had carnal connection with plaintiff's wife.

NOTE.—Winsmore vs. Greenbank, Willes, 577, 581.

The Court must be satisfied that there has been a surrender not only of the mind but of the person. Hamerton vs. Hamerton, 2 Hagg. Ecc., 8. Robinson vs. Robinson, 1 Swabey and Tr. 362. Davidson vs. Davidson, 1 Deane, Eng. Ecc., 132. Hunt vs. Hunt, 1 Id., 121, 129. Simmons vs. Simmons, 1 Robertson, Eng. Ecc., 566; S. C. more fully reported 5 Notes of Cas. 324, affirmed in 6 Notes of Cas. 578. Caton vs. Caton, 7 Notes of Cas., 16. And see Wilson vs. Wilson, 1 Wright, Ch. (Ohio) 123.

V.

The jury must find for the defendant unless convinced by the proofs of the actual adultery, beyond all reasonable doubt.

NOTE.—In Berckmans vs. Berckmans (Court of Error and Appeals, 1864, opinion by Van Dyke, J., 17 N. J. Eq., 2 C. E. Green, 453; affirming, 16 Ib., 122), the rule was laid down as follows:—"The complainant is under the necessity, not only of placing a decided preponderance of testimony in favor of the charge, but of proving it to the satisfaction of the Court, beyond a reasonable doubt. I do not mean to say that it must be done by such an amount of overwhelming and unmistakable evidence as to render it impossible to be otherwise; but the evidence must be such as to satisfy the human mind, and leave the careful and guarded judgment of the Court free from any conscientious and perplexing doubts as to whether the charge be proved or not."

"If, after a careful examination of all the competent testimony, such doubts remain immovable, it is clearly our duty to give the defendant the benefit of such doubt."

Followed in Freeman vs. Freeman, 31 Wisc., 235.

In both these cases the verdict or decree was set aside for violation of this rule.

To the same effect Anonymous 17 Abb. Pr., 48, and see Green vs. Green, 26 Mich., 437.

Dillon vs. Dillon, 1 Notes of Ecc. and Mar. Cases, 415, 442. (Consistory Conn., 1842. Dr. Lushington.) Suit against wife for divorce by reason of adultery. Held, that this is, as concerns the wife, not a civil suit, but in effect a criminal proceeding; if there be any doubt she is entitled to the benefit of it. Even if the evidence in support of the charge preponderates, yet if the Court cannot say that the proof is free from reasonable doubt, the charge is not sustained.

Stone vs. Stone.—3 Notes of Ecc. and Mar. Cases, 278, 504. (Consistory Court, 1844, Dr. Lushington.) Suit for divorce for adultery. The Court says:—"I must remember that I am considering not whether adultery did take place, for the absolute truth cannot be known to a human judge, but whether the evidence with ordinary certainty establishes the fact. I must not give way to suspicion or surmise. I must be governed by the legitimate results of legal evidence."

VI.

The verdict must be for the defendant, unless the results of the whole evidence on both sides be such as to produce in the deliberate conclusion of the jury a legal certainty of guilt.

VII.

The charge of adultery is one that not merely involves a pecuniary claim against the defendant, but criminates the plaintiff's wife and tends to disgrace her children, and threatens the marriage relation itself; and it is proper for the jury to consider these ordinary and natural consequences of a conviction, in scrutinizing the evidence and exacting adequate proof to establish an accusation involving such grave, permanent and remediless consequences to others.

VIII.

If, on weighing the evidence on both sides, there remains in the mind of the jury doubt or perplexity as to the actual adultery, they must find for the defendant.

Mr. Beach insisted that Mr. Abbott should not argue the case.

The Judge—Certainly not.

IX.

The higher the crime or the graver the wrong sought to be established the more stringently the rules of evidence should be enforced, and a charge of criminal conversation is not to be fixed upon a person but by the highest evidence.

X.

If there were any evidence in the case pointing to adultery at any specific time and place the defendant might have some means of supporting, by other witnesses, his own testimony to his innocence; but upon the evidence adduced by the plaintiff, the defendant is the only witness who has any actual knowledge of what the relations between himself and Mrs. Tilton were, and is the only person whom the law permits to speak as a witness as to those relations.

Mr. Beach protested that this was argument.

The Judge—Certainly; I understand that.

XI.

Circumstantial evidence to establish guilt must be such as to exclude to a moral certainty every hypothesis but that of guilt; in other words the facts proved must not only all be consistent with, and point to guilt, but they must be inconsistent with innocence.

Mr. Beach—Why, this was in a criminal case.

The Judge—That is true, Mr. Beach.

XII.

The law does not dispense with direct proof of the sexual act, and accept circumstantial evidence of intimacy in lieu thereof, unless there is actual proof of conduct of the parties deviating from open and honorable adherence to the proprieties of chaste society, and showing a lustful disposition and purpose on their part, and the opportunity, by their resort to seclusion and security.

XIII.

The circumstances must be such as would lead the guarded discretion of a reasonable and just man to the conclusion of actual guilt. For it is not to lead a harsh and intemperate judgment moving upon appearances that are equally capable of two interpretations; neither is it to be a matter of artificial reasoning, judging upon such things differently from what would strike the careful and cautious consideration of a discreet man.

XIV.

The proximate acts relied on must lead, by a fair inference, to a conclusion so far inevitable as that the supposition of innocence cannot by any just course of reasoning be reconciled with it.

XV.

When, in addition to the open relation of intimate friendship, there is superadded the pastoral relation, no intendment against the chastity or propriety of that intercourse can be drawn, except upon proof of actual lustful deviations from the intercourse of society appropriate to such relations.

XVI.

No charge or confession on the part of the plaintiff's wife is evidence against the defendant.

XVII.

None of the letters and writings of Mrs. Tilton put in evidence, upon their face, as matter of law import a confession of adultery or sexual indelicacy, or furnish any proof of either by themselves.

XVIII.

Where a party has destroyed a paper material to his case and the contents of the paper are disputed, the presumption arises that, if it had been produced, it would have been against his interest, or in some essential particular unfavorable to his representation of its contents.

It was now after four o'clock.

Mr. Morris—I suggest that we adjourn, and that Your Honor name a day to hear the balance of the requests.

Mr. Abbott—I will conclude soon.

Mr. Morris—I judged from the bulk of your manuscript it would take a day at least.

XIX.

If the jury believe that the "True Story," as it is called, substantially as put in evidence, is the work of this plaintiff, they must find a verdict for the defendant.

XX.

The letters of Mrs. Tilton to the defendant, which have been put in evidence, do not, as matter of law, upon their face bear any indecent or illicit signification; and the fact that defendant, instead of destroying or secreting these letters of Mrs. Tilton, voluntarily disclosed them and handed them over to Mr. Moulton, is a cogent confirmation of the defendant's testimony that he did not understand them in any indecent or illicit sense.

XXI.

The letters and oral statements that have been adduced, as in the nature of confessions, are to be considered in their entirety, and as together covering a long period of years; and the jury are to consider whether it is credible that the defendant could have made such oral statements, as are attributed to him and denied by him, and whether it is credible that such letters could have been written by him with reference to guilt of adultery.

XXII.

The expressions of compunction and remorse in the defendant's writings and alleged conversations belong to the class of merely moral evidence, and neither tend to support, nor are capable of supporting, any legal certainty as to the fact, nature or degree of imputed culpability.

Mr. Morris—I hope Your Honor will examine all the authorities cited to-night.

The Judge—I know all about the cases quoted. They are all divorce cases.

Mr. Morris—Of course they are.

XXIII.

Testimony of witnesses that a party charged, in conversation, admitted his guilt of adultery, is the weakest and most dangerous evidence that is received by the law.

XXIV.

The testimony of witnesses (even if fully credited) that the defendant in conversation admitted that he had committed adultery, being met by his sworn denial upon the trial, is not sufficient proof of his guilt, unless the alleged confessions are corroborated by other satisfactory and consistent testimony.

XXV.

In considering whether the testimony of the alleged verbal admissions is corroborated the jury must look at the whole course of conduct of the plaintiff and his witnesses in their intercourse with the defendant since the charge was first made and consider whether it is possible or probable that this conduct and social intercourse could have taken place if the defendant was charged or believed by them to be an adulterer.

XXVI.

Where a person is charged with immoral conduct, under such circumstance that he has no legal direct evidence of his innocence other than his own oath, the fact that he endeavored to prevent publicity or to avoid public controversy is no evidence of guilt.

XXVII.

The plaintiff's written statement, that the imputed offence of the defendant was the making of improper proposals, and that defendant denied the charge, might be overthrown by direct proof of the act of adultery, but it cannot be overthrown by oral testimony of a different oral charge and admission.

XXVIII.

As a matter of law, the paper of January 1, 1871, called the apology or letter of contrition (Exhibit No. 2), does not on its face import any act of adultery or of sexual indelicacy, and is no proof of either.

XXIX.

None of the defendant's letters and writings put in evidence, upon their face as matter of law, import adultery or sexual indelicacy, or furnish any proof of either, by themselves. The fact of either must be supplied by other legitimate proof, before the law allows the inference that such fact prompted the expressions of the letters and writings.

XXX.

None of the defendant's letters or writings put in evidence ascertain or declare the fact of adultery. They only declare and express the emotions of the defendant, of commiseration and self-reproach at the broken fortunes of the plaintiff and domestic unhappiness of his family, as presented to the defendant's appreciation as detailed by himself.

XXXI.

If the jury find that the plaintiff's wife left him in December, 1870, on account of his conduct and treatment and with a view to separating from him, and that the defendant in December, 1870, gave information of the facts to his wife and to an officer of his church and to the plaintiff's employer, and advised a separation of the wife from her husband, these facts must be considered by the jury as corroborating the defendant's testimony and discredit that of the plaintiff on the main issue.

XXXII.

The fact that the plaintiff continued to cohabit with his wife after her alleged communication to him of the charge and up to July, 1874, is cogent evidence against the truth of the present charge.

XXXIII.

The silence of the plaintiff toward the defendant for nearly six months after he says he was in possession of the fact that adultery had been committed is cogent evidence against the truth of the present charge.

XXXIV.

The testimony of the plaintiff that he first disclosed any charge against the defendant to his employer in connection with business arrangements, and united with him in an effort to drive defendant from Brooklyn, and that he made no disclosures of the charge to the defendant until this effort failed, is cogent evidence against the truth of the present charge.

XXXV.

The fact that after making the charge, and learning that it was retracted by his wife, the plaintiff became reconciled with the defendant, and restored the social relations of himself and wife with him, is cogent evidence against the truth of the present charge.

XXXVI.

The four years' delay of the plaintiff in making any open charge of adultery against the defendant, and bringing of such open charge only in consequence of irritations and resentments proceeding from other causes, are cogent evidences against the truthfulness and good faith of the present charge.

XXXVII.

Where, on a material question of fact, the plaintiff swears one way and the defendant directly adverse, and the defendant puts in evidence a written statement made by the plaintiff before the action was commenced and flatly contradicting his testimony, the jury are bound to consider his testimony on the point as conclusively discredited.

XXXVIII.

If the jury believe that the plaintiff or any other witness of his has wilfully sworn falsely on a material point, they should disregard the whole testimony of such witness.

XXXIX.

When a witness testifies to a conversation of the defendant at which no person was present, there are no means of direct contradiction, except by the oath of the defendant. If the jury find a train of circumstances inconsistent with the alleged conversation, and the conversation is fully denied by the defendant, they may reject the testimony to such alleged conversation.

XL.

The unequivocal admissions of the plaintiff himself and of Mr. Moulton, that they have deliberately and systematically represented the facts involved in this present charge in a manner wholly inconsistent with the present charge, and in maintenance of the defendant's and Mrs. Tilton's innocence, discredits their testimony to the contrary now given, and requires its rejection by the jury as wholly untrustworthy.

The Judge said he would take the requests and return them in the morning.

At the conclusion of the reading of the requests to charge Mr. Beach made his motion to reopen the case for the admission of new evidence, as already described. The Court then adjourned.

As soon as the Court adjourned Mr. Beach and Mr. Evarts stood up and grasped each other cordially by the hand as they mutually congratulated one another upon their conduct of the case. Mr. Beecher was surrounded by his friends, and a sturdy-looking son of Albion, grasping the hand of the illustrious defendant, said, "Mr. Beecher, I am an Englishman, but I would rather shake hands with you than I would with the Queen." Mr. Beecher laughed pleasantly as he returned the friendly pressure of the stranger's palm, and with similar peculiar episodes the hundred and twelfth day of the greatest trial in Christendom closed.

HOSPITAL FOR SUNSTRUCK PATIENTS.

Mayor Wickham and Comptroller Green yesterday received copies of resolutions passed by the Governors of the Society of the New York Hospital setting forth the following facts:—At present no adequate house of relief exists in the lower part of the city for cases of sunstroke and other accidents. The Board recommend the appropriation of the late police station house in Beekman or Chambers streets, either of which would be a suitable building for the purposes contemplated. It now appears that the proper authority in relation to this matter must come from the Sinking Fund Commissioners, of which Mayor Wickham is chairman. In case this consent is obtained it is directed, under the resolutions passed by the society, that their committee in charge of the subject should at once proceed to fit up and furnish such building for the occupancy of patients, and that communication be had with the Commissioners of Charities and Correction, in order that the city may be properly districted and the ambulances made useful in transferring patients. No charge is to be made for treatment.

The warm weather is upon us, and immediate action upon this important subject is very desirable. A downtown hospital of this character is much needed.

COMMENCEMENTS.

Attractive and Impressive Collegiate Exercises.

A GALA DAY AT VASSAR.

Forty-two Ladies Take the Bachelor's Degree.

INAUGURATION OF PRESIDENT BUGBEE.

Cardinal McCloskey at St. Mary's College.

ADDRESS OF HIS EMINENCE.

Mr. Patterson's Address on Scholarship and Public Questions at Dartmouth.

Commencement Exercises at Rutgers, Syracuse and Union Colleges.

Yesterday will be greatly distinguished in collegiate history. Commencement exercises were observed at several of the more renowned institutions of learning in the country. Vassar was bright and joyous, as it always is on these occasions, and transformed forty-two young lady students into bachelors of arts. At ancient St. Mary's America's first cardinal was present, to add lustre to the Commencement Day of his Alma Mater, and took a distinguished part in the proceedings. The graduates and friends of Syracuse University had an opportunity to listen to the bright and wise sayings of Chancellor Haven on "The Signs of the Times," and at Allegheny College, Dr. Bugbee was inaugurated as President. The College of New York and other educational institutions in the city made the day memorable by interesting exercises.

VASSAR COLLEGE.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES—FORTY-TWO FEMALE BACHELORS—ORATIONS BY THE LADIES.

POUGHKEEPSIE, June 23, 1875.

To-day again the weather has been propitious for the Vassar girls. The cloudy threat of morning gave place to the sunny assurance of noonday, and just before the opening of the Commencement exercises the sky became clear and the air summery. In every way the day was a fitting one for what the valedictorian called "stepping across the threshold of the future." To witness this auspicious ceremony there came to town, during the last few days, no less than 1,000 people from all parts of the Union. Some to see the last collegiate efforts of their children; others, attracted by love of novelty, came to be astonished at the heights to which the female mind attains on the Mount Parnassus. The essays read to-day were in every way equal to those generally read at the Commencements of male institutions.

THE VALEDICTORY

of Miss Florence Clinton Perkins, of Cooperstown, was no ordinary effort. It showed a depth of feeling and a grace of expression which few men could hope to rival. Its feeling allusions to the congenial friends and intellectual affinities of the old college were discussed in a gossamer of rhetoric, and appealed more to the heart than to the ear. It was an Oriental farewell, long and lingering, but when finished, "'twas only a farewell." It baffles analysis; no particular point remains in the mind, but the whole has left a deep impression. The tone of all the oration was universal and progressive, showing that the minds of the students have not been hampered with the obsolete conventionalities with which some deem it indispensable to surround the budding female mind. Masculinity of thought seems to be more a matter of training than of sex, for the essays of to-day—many of them from feeble girls—were as strong in thought and as bold in conception as any of the youth of Harvard or Yale could pronounce. From the programme published below it will be seen that the themes which claim the attention of Vassar girls are not light or idle ones. Politics, religion, science and art all claim a prominent place in their thought. These topics are not thought from text books, but are treated as each individual chooses. A proof of this is to be found in the rival essays of Miss Kate Louise Maltby and Miss Kate McBain. Although Miss Maltby made out a strong case for science, Miss McBain's for the fine arts was stronger.

A notable feature of the celebration was the scarcity of music, which at most seminary commencements is very plentiful. This lack of effort on the part of fingers was perhaps compensated for by extra activity of brains.

THE EXERCISES.

The exercises were held in the chapel, where yesterday the "class day" celebration was initiated. On the platform were seated the trustees of the college, including Matthew Vassar, nephew of the founder; Rev. Ezekiel G. Robinson, of Providence; Cornelius Robinson, Rev. Edward Lothrop, D. D.; Charles W. Swift, Stephen H. Buckingham, John Gay Vassar, Rev. Rufus Babcock, Cornelius Dubois, John H. Raymond, LL. D.; Cyrus Swann, George H. Sterling; Augustus L. Allen; Edward L. Beadle, M. D.; and George Innis. Among the guests who were honored with seats among the faculty on the stage were Ex-Governor Pease, of Texas, and General Terry, of Fort Fisher fame. In the body of the church the graduating class, their parents and immediate friends were seated. As each speaker took the stand she was greeted with applause, which, when she was popular, was prolonged by the sophomores and juniors who occupied the galleries.

"An hour like this is worth a thousand passed
In pomp and ease—'tis present to the last!
Years glide away untold—'tis still the same;
As fresh, as fair, as on the day it came."

Many of the older graduates were present to see the "new class" (as that of '75 is called) graduate. The class of '75 acquired the name of "new" from the fact that when it entered the collegiate course a new system of training was introduced into Vassar. The new system was to elevate the educational standard of the house and make the discipline more severe. Of course, like all college reforms, this one was unpopular, and during the first years of the course much belligerency was shown by the girls. During the later years they seem to have accepted the situation and set themselves to work to make the best of it. That standards have been improved we have the word of President Raymond, who, in bidding the class "good by," spoke of how successful all the new experiments had been with them.

The class was a naturally progressive one, for once it rebelled against a compulsory Bible class, and the good book was only kept in respect by a fiat of Mr. Vassar, who said that the Bible should be a text book at Vassar.

The exercises opened with prayer by Rev. Dr. Robinson, of Brown University, who was introduced by President Raymond. He supplicated the benediction of God on the efforts of the young ladies, and prayed that all their lives might be as bright as the day which was now granted them. He petitioned the Providence which had seen them safely through college to guide them through life.

When the reverend gentleman was seated, Miss Frances Goldsmith Swift came forward and pronounced the oratio salutatoria. Her remarks in Latin to the trustees were evidently appreciated by most of the members of that august body.

THE ESSAYS.

The salutatory finished, Miss Florence Curry Wheat came forward to discuss the "Independence of Church and State." None of her ideas were new, but she showed in her treatment of the subject much research. In the passage, "Render unto Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's, and unto God the things that are God's," she found the divine mandate which declared both institutions independent. The one, she said, was the governing instrument of man as a member of society, the other his governing instrument as an individual. She did not venture on the merits of the case considered in a politico economic view, but carefully avoided any allusion to the same. After having declared herself eminently in favor of the independence of both institutions she retired, and Miss Mary Frances Buffington came forward to dissertate on the "Achievements of Theoretical Chemistry." This paper was, though a very labored still a very learned one, and stamped its author as a thinker. Chemists she divided into two classes, the analytical chemist and the theoretical chemist. The first she defined "an observer," the latter "a philosopher." The one lived in a world of physical facts, the other is only limited by the picturing power of his mind. She traced in quick succession the different changes which succeeding theories had wrought in the science until she arrived at the automatic theory of to-day, which, though first opposed, is now accepted. She very justly claimed that this theory had bridged the chasm between mineral and organic chemistry. After saying that the old chemists were mere analists, and that new ones had raised synthesis to a science, she closed with an appeal for imagination in these words:—"Let not imagination in science be despised—I do not mean unbridled imagination, but imagination governed by a conservative judgment. It has done much for science lately and will shortly do more."

After the execution of the first movement from Beethoven's symphony in C minor by the Misses Loreiu, Hollister, Pease and Chamberlain, Miss Lucy Wright Kellogg came forward to say:—"Der Vaticanismus ist ein Feind des Fortscritts und der Freiheit." (The influence of the Vatican an enemy to progress and freedom.)

THE ESSAY.

Her essay was German in its thought as well as speech. She spoke in glowing terms of the dissenting German bishops, sneered at the pilgrims to La Sallette, and aired many a threadbare objection to the Vatican influence. There was enough of originality, however, in the effort to stamp Miss Kellogg as a person of no mean ability. Had she known more of the Vatican and its influence she might have filled the pages of her effort; but having depended on others for her information, her arguments lost force, they having become hackneyed by many repetitions.

Miss Kate Louise Maltby next faced the audience to prove that the sciences were superior to the fine arts in their influence on progress. She opened with the assertion that art appeals to man's senses and accomplishes no result; that science adds utility to beauty and promotes man's comfort. "What results of art" she asks, "which can be compared with the results of the telegraph, the steam press and locomotive?" Again, questioning her hearers, she asks, "Is not the steam engine greater than the brush, and the telegraph greater than the chisel?" After many more such cogent arguments, in favor of her proposition, she took her seat to make room for Miss Kate McBain, whose aim it was to prove that the fine arts are superior to the sciences in their influence on progress.

In science, said the fair debater, one century laughs at another, and all through the chain of years theory explodes theory. The opinion which science holds of art has been told to us. Does its narrator, deeply versed in science, remember the time when men thought that the sun made a diurnal trip around the world? If so she may also know that that opinion did not in the least way affect the sun. Nor does science's opinion of art alter art one whit or tittle; it is what it always has been, an educator of men. The great achievements of science have been spoken of to us. They have been brought about by a few men who now stand on the hilltop of fame, while around the base panting and unsatisfied thousands have gathered. "Gaze," said Miss McBain, "on the eminence occupied by great artists." See the thousands drinking in gladness and inspiration in the contemplation of their works of brush and chisel! Hear the responsive throb of a million hearts to the melody of the musician! They say the arts are sensuous and idle, but the absurdity of the assertion is evident. In art every mental faculty is called into play. Let me ask the fair champion of science—Did civilization only begin when science began to thunder? Is it not true that long before its voice became potent and had opened channels of sympathy between nations? Can the chemist make a perfect being out of his separable parts? Is science productive of moral advancement? With this volley of interrogations she closed, and Miss Alice Lydia Graham read a paper on the "Theory of Reform." Miss Kate Roberts, who came next, had two great men to deal with, Agassiz and Darwin. She found in the early surroundings of these men the cause of their different opinions. The first being the descendant of six generations of clergymen, he had too much respect for precedent to allow him to go from the beaten track. The other was early taught independence, and so when quite young, being of a philosophical turn of mind, he began to reason for himself and express the results of such reasoning. To sum up Miss Roberts' opinions of both men it may be said that she thinks Agassiz was too respectful of precedent, while her chief objection to Darwin is to be found in the menagerie.

The last address on the programme was the "Valedictory," delivered by Miss Florence Clinton Perkins, which has been spoken of above.

After a piano solo by Miss McBain the following young ladies received baccalaureate degrees:—

RUTGERS COLLEGE.

COMMENCEMENT DAY PROPER—THE ELECTION OF OFFICERS BY THE ALUMNI—GRADUATION CEREMONIES—HONORS AND PRIZES—A SPEECH IN JAPANESE.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., June 23, 1875.

The proceedings at Rutgers this morning began with the meeting of the alumni, adjourned over from yesterday. The only business transacted was the election of officers and the passage of resolutions of sympathy over the decease of the late Secretary, H. K. How.

At ten o'clock the procession of trustees, faculty and students formed on the campus and marched down to the Opera House, headed by Downing's Ninth Regiment Band. The following programme of exercises, interspersed with music, was promptly begun:—John H. Salisbury, Catskill, N. Y., "Latin Salutatory;" C. L. D. Washburn, Jersey City, "English Salutatory;" J. Preston Searle, Wyckoff, "Philosophical Oration;" H. A. Hendrickson, Queens, N. Y., "Scientific Oration;" Robert Barr, Paterson, "Truth Its Own Vindicator;" James G. Sutphen, Millstone, "The Oratory of Cicero;" Arthur L. Titsworth, Plainfield, "Invisible Forces;" Ichy Zo Hattori, Japan, "Sinpo-no Junio."

This speech of Mr. Hattori was in Japanese, but it was delivered with such earnestness and spirit that it was vociferously received, and the speaker was covered with wreaths and bouquets.

After the applause for Mr. Hattori had subsided the programme was taken up as follows:—Oliver H. Walser, New Brighton, N. Y., "Japan in the Nineteenth Century, and Russia Under Peter the Great;" Philetus T. Pockman, East Greenbush, N. Y., "Originality;" B. V. D. Wyckoff, Middlebush, "The Cross of European Warfare;" W. F. Anderson, East Greenbush, N. Y., "Womanhood in Shakespeare;" Jacob E. Ward, Madison, "Oliver Cromwell;" W. P. Watson, Warrensburg, N. Y., "Maximilian I.;" James Kemlo, Brooklyn, N. Y., "The Heroism of Eloquence;" conferring of degrees and prizes; George S. Duryea, Newark, master's oration; John H. Salisbury, Catskill, N. Y., valedictory. Benediction. College airs.

SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES—THE CHANCELLOR'S ADDRESS AND CONFERRING OF DEGREES.

SYRACUSE, June 23, 1875.

Colleges of a sickly growth or uncertain tenure of life are not apt to make many friends, but rather to receive the cold shoulder of many who would be friends to them if their entrance into existence among the colleges were of sound and healthy birth. Hardly an institution exists to-day which cannot point to the time when its funds were low, its students few, and friends fewer still, and the chances of its living very slim. Not so was it with this university. It was exceedingly fortunate at the outset in obtaining from Genesee College the endowment, library, museum, the best of its professors, and last, but not least, in obtaining, by a judicious and generous stroke of policy, the Alumni of that institution as its friends. This was accomplished by "adopting" as Alumni all who signified a wish to hold that relation to the newer institution. Among these men and women are those who hold high positions in every department of life. Since the founding of this college its libraries and museum have been greatly increased; its faculty made larger by the acquisition of such men as Alexander Winchell, LL. D., of Michigan University, a man widely known in America and Europe as a profound thinker and scientist, and who belongs to a half dozen European scientific associations, and the Rev. E. O. Haven, D.D., LL. D., the present Chancellor, the former President of Michigan and Northwestern Universities, and afterward Secretary of the Board of Education of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The same success that attended Dr. Haven in building up those two universities has attended him in the work of building up the Syracuse University. He has freed the institute from debt, and added more than $100,000 to its endowment. The original endowment was $400,000.

On Friday evening last the declamatory contest of the Sophomore Class took place in the College chapel. No prizes are awarded. Men are selected by the choice of different professors; they receive instruction from the Professors of Elocution and appear so as to show the progress made by the class in that department in the year just closing. The one in question was highly appreciated by the large audience, as it was of more than ordinary merit.

Monday was class day. At two P. M. the graduates, except the ladies, took position upon the chapel stage, where the following programme was carried out:—Address, William A. Wood; "History," J. M. Gilbert; Poem, Wheeler; "Prophecy," J. C. Nichols. The History was especially good, being fresh, humorous and entertaining throughout. The Prophecy had the charm of novelty combined with wit. The graduates then marched to the front of the building, when the presenter, on behalf D. Buck, presented in behalf of '75 a clock to Chancellor Haven for the University. It was accepted in a short speech. It is placed in the tower of the Hall of Languages. The plate is engraved with the words, "Class 1875."

Other exercises then took place at the class tree, consisting of an oration by J. B. Coit; Pipe Ceremony, by W. H. Shuart; Advice, M. J. Wells; Parting Ceremony, E. W. Goodier and A. R. Beal. The crowd dispersed and '75's work was done. The class numbers nineteen, four of whom are women. They took no part in the exercises. In the list of graduates for degree of A. B.:—Libbie T. Arnold, Alpha R. Beal, Charles Black, M. D. Buck, J. B. Coit, C. A. Congdon, J. M. Gilbert, E. W. Goodier, C. D. Lathrop, J. D. Nichols, E. S. Osborn, H. L. Peet, W. H. Shuart, M. J. Wells, N. M. Wheeler. For B. S.:—Clara Bannister, H. F. Chidester, W. H. Dunlap, K. E. Hogeboom, W. A. Wood.

The other degrees to be conferred are as follows:—M. S., G. H. Baker, N. K. Fowler, H. O. Harris, M. L. Huntley, H. W. Morris, J. E. Weaver (these have already the degree of B. S. for degree of A. M.), F. D. Blakeslee, F. J. Cheney, J. L. Cole A. M., Yale, ad eundem; J. M. Dolph, A. H. Dorris, A. M., Genesee, ad eundem; J. G. H. Dryer, O. E. Pitch, E. W. Hall, A. M., Genesee, ad eundem; E. Horr, causa honoris; R. C. Houghton, causa honoris. R. S. Keyser; W. Mann, A. A. Phelps, A. M., Genessee, ad eundem. W. H. Rogers, A. M., Alfred, ad euendem; W. F. Steele for degree of Ph. D. James R. Jacques, A. M., Bloomington, Ill. L. D. Watson, A. M., Orleans. This and all other degrees are conferred after passing examinations, rigid proportionately to the character of the degree.

For degree of M. D., Louisa L. Woodin.

For degree of B. P. (Bachelor of Painting), M. M. Maycock, who will be the first man in America receiving that degree from a university.

Seventy were present at the Alumni meeting on Tuesday, which was a large attendance. C. M. Underhill, of Buffalo, was re-elected President of the association. Music by the University Glee Club. A poem by M. M. Merill, and an oration by Rev. J. M. Reid constituted the literary features of the meeting, and they were both excellent. At the banquet at the Temperance Hotel these toasts were offered and responded to:—"Syracuse University—Our Alma Mater." Responded to by Chancellor Haven. "Old and New." Responded to by Dr. Bennett, of the University. "The Alumni of Syracuse University." Response by G. W. Elliott, of the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle. "Co-Education." Response by Mrs. B. A. Lockwood, Attorney, Washington, D. C. A comment upon the success of co-education that a lady should come so far to respond to a toast. "The well behaved and loyal students, the Faculty in disseminating good morals on the hill at Genessee College." Response by Rev. Mr. Reid. The Commencement exercises proper were then begun, and Chancellor Haven delivered a brilliant address.

CHANCELLOR HAVEN'S ADDRESS.

The subject of the Chancellor's address was the "Signs of the Times." The following are passages from the latter part of it, and will sufficiently indicate its purport and spirit:—

The demand of the hour is that Christianity should be aggressive. It should assert its righteous claim to all that is good, and fearlessly and heartily and with the strongest faith, adopt every agency material, mental and spiritual, and work it up to the maximum of its usefulness, and make it consecrate its tribute to Him by whom and for whom all things were made, even Christ. Once there was an opposition between Christianity and science, that opposition should exist no longer. Christianity the whole should absorb science, one of its parts. Those Christian preachers who exhibit a tremulousness when a new scientific hypothesis is announced or a new generalization is formulated, necessarily demanding a revolution of nomenclature, and introducing a new volume of illustrations of the divine government through material things, betray their own infidelity—not the infidelity of science. A true Christian never trembles for God or His cause. If the Almighty has worked out His purposes through His material fabrics and organic creations according to the development theory and a struggle for existence, Christians, most of all, should desire to know it, and when it is known a grander analogy than that of Butler shall be seen between His material and spiritual kingdoms.

So many anniversary addresses and editorials now commence with the stereotyped thought, "We live in a wonderful age, an age of progress," that it is disagreeable to a man of taste to allude to it; but there is a philosophical cause for every popular impression. In the estimation of its own value and in prophetic visions of coming greatness this age stands, it not quite alone among the centuries, yet associated with only a few, and they are actually the most marked of all ancient times. You seek in vain in the classic literature of Greece and Rome for a parallel thought. The Eclogue of Virgil to Pollio, which Pope has so skilfully adapted to a prophecy of Christ, is almost alone in both Grecian and Roman literature in foretelling a brighter era. But visions of coming barbarism and anarchy, an age lower than iron, then oppressed the minds of men. Aged men left the world groaning with pity that their descendants were doomed to live in such degenerate days, instead of, as now, longing to see the wondrous advancements that another fifty years will produce. Careful study will show that within 100 years this general exultation and promise of better days has sprung up. Not until after the dawn did a few watchmen raise the shout. The great and comprehensive student of all wisdom, Leibnitz, was perhaps the very first to utter a clear and ringing voice in favor of the world's speedy and sure advancement. His theme found, amid much opposition, some ears responsive, and Descartes, a man who, had he lived when Aristotle did, would have had more influence than the Stagyrite, and whose empire over the thought of the world became less extensive and lasting than that of the former, only because there was more thought, and it would not be governed by one soul, spoke out nobly and heartily in language such as Plato never used, that then startled all who considered it, but now is as common as a thrice told tale. The noblest minds of Germany and France and England caught up the theme, and the music that once thrilled the hearts of a select few was soon popularized, and with a thousand variations may now be heard in every voice. Now it is with ages as with men. Every thought producer has had an impression, perhaps supernatural, of a higher power impelling him to his destiny. Alexander had no doubt that it was his destiny to rival Achilles. The fancy had been indulged so long that it became prophecy, and secured its own fulfilment. Socrates had his dæmon and could not shrink from the duties it prescribed. Cæsar exhibited the same—not superstition but inspiration—when he exclaimed to the affrighted oarsmen, "Quid times? Cæsarem vehis!" Does any Christian doubt that a similar but vastly superior intuition animated Luther and Wesley and other reformers—only less because these were greater? Even so have ages their destiny. And the general, popular expectation is its exponent. Sneer at it as we may, it is the manifest destiny of this age to accomplish a great work, and no age has ever stamped the world that has not been inspired with the same promise—while blank, stagnant, retrograding, putrefying times, as well as just such men, have been destitute of the bright eye, the elastic step, the buoyant hope. Full of this conviction, young friends, I have not striven on this occasion to regale your ears with high sounding metaphors and world startling conceits. No! such puerilities are fitted for a useful age. Anagrams, acrostics, strange combinations of syllables and letters, that spell the same backward as forward and make equally good and equally non-sense both ways—such things were becoming the dark ages which produced the most of them! The taming of mice and teaching dogs to spell, the black art of the conjurer, harnessing fleas and constructing steam engines no larger than a lady's thimble, all are very appropriate for prisoners, monks and simpletons in human form. The stringing together of pretty tropes and strange expressions in what are called splendid speeches is not a whit more dignified or useful. The gift of speech is divine. Be it yours and mine to think and speak and act as God demands in this our time. Be it ours to prognosticate and to expect and to toil for the time when brothers shall hate and oppress each other no more, and when the supreme wisdom of Christ shall govern every man; and if this hope of ours be a delusion still the world will bless us, and we the world, and the earth will afford us honorable graves.

The honorary degree of D. D. was then conferred upon the Rev. A. F. Beard, pastor of Plymouth Congregational church in this city, and that of LL. D. upon Rev. L. D. McCabe, D. D., President of the Ohio Wesleyan University.

DARTMOUTH COLLEGE.

CLASS DAY—THE PROGRAMME—AN ORATION BY J. W. PATTERSON, WITH POETRY AND MUSIC.

HANOVER, N. H., June 23, 1875.

The sun rose bright and clear, making the distant hills of the Old Granite State glow with effulgent beams of light, and rising toward its zenith it looks down upon this little town of Hanover, nestling among the rugged cliffs of the surrounding mountains. But never did Hanover look more lovely. Nature and art seems to have conspired to produce this result; the grass and trees have now on their brightest green, that color which is confidently expected will cross the line first next month at Saratoga. The old church and college halls, around which clusters so many happy memories of the past, have been handsomely decorated so as to meet the approving glance of admiring visitors. Every one looks pleased and happy. There is an especial reason to rejoice, inasmuch as Mr. Tabb Wentworth, of Lowell, Mass., a New Hampshire man and an eminent lawyer, after leaving a few legacies to individuals gives his whole very large estate to Dartmouth College, to constitute a permanent fund, the income to be used as the trustees see fit. It is not, however, to be used until the principal has accumulated to $500,000, which will probably take but two or three years. This is the largest gift that Dartmouth has ever received.

The order of exercises for to-morrow is very interesting and attractive.

JAMES W. PATTERSON'S ADDRESS.

"The Relation of Scholarship to Public Questions" was in the form of an address by Mr. James W. Patterson, before the P. B. K. Society, and was received with great applause:—

It is a very obvious and a very old truth that conduct and character are an expression of inner life. "As he thinketh in his heart so is he," is both an ancient and modern proverb. There is a constant flux between the natural and unnatural, the perishable and imperishable. As the universe is a glorious emanation of the thought of God so human history is the transcendent expression of the soul of man. Civilization is but the aggregate product of intellectual culture. Greek eloquence and literature were superior to that of Egypt, because the Greek intellect had attained to a loftier reach of thought. Thought, whether found in song or in verse, has a wizard power which masters all things. The influence of a single controlling mind like that of Bacon or Aristotle is incalculable. But the pure conception of genius cannot be made the basis of popular institutions, however, they may be an inspiration to individual effort and the germ of future civilization. But to be practicable they should be thoroughly tested. The Republic of Plato was a splendid dream but impossible to be realized as a form of human government. The science of politics is eminently experimental. All civil institutions must rest upon principles which have been formed by experience, for when the principles of a free State are imperfectly comprehended by the popular mind, as in Mexico or Spain, there can be no stability of government.

Then the speaker went on to say that the disciplined and scholarly intellects are always the ruling spirits. The genius of Greece, the intellect of Rome and the old seats of learning at Paris and Salamanca have lifted men from barbarism and pedantry. In the long run of history he who thinks best fights best. It was the philosophy of Bacon, not the sword of Marlborough, that opened the sluices of Saxon power. Influence is measured by brain power. By study the scholar's judgment is matured, his passions are tempered. All harmony must be practical. To-day, if ever, independent thought and a fearless expression are neccessary. Men drift in masses before the sirocco of the press like the sands of the desert. The wicked recognize this new force and do homage to it. If the power of the press is to be utilized for the improvement of the race it must be by you who go forth from our seats of learning, and by you must these living issues be grappled.

We have based our institutions upon the axiom that all men are free and equal; but I apprehend we may be in danger of a fatal mistake in its application, for men seem disposed to treat superior capacity and exalted character as a violation of their right of equality. If ever the day shall come when the ignorant is preferred for places of trust to the talented, then will legislation cease to be national.

In our modern civilization journalism has become a leading profession. It is more. It is an organized institution which we justly regard with pride and admiration. Under our free government it enjoys every possible right. But when low newsmongers, facile mercenaries and graduates from the lowest forms of the district school ascend the tripod and discourse upon all high themes which they cannot comprehend, when such a Bacchanalian crew prostitutes the sacred right of a noble priesthood at the altars of Mammon and plays the mysteries of Hecate, the whole country stands in the breath of a pestilence, and the plague must come. We pass naturally from the press to finance. Irredeemable paper issued by an individual is fraudulent and void; when issued by the government it is no better. The rule of justice which Heaven lays upon the individual is also binding upon his government. The citizen who attempts to pay his debts with valueless paper is visited with the penalties of the law as a knave; a government should be equally culpable. If this principle was only thoroughly understood there would be no trouble about settling this great question.

Equally unnatural and unnecessary seems this endless strife between capital and labor. Here, too, the underlying principle is simple. Capital and labor are both properly under different forms, hence each is entitled to a share of the profits in proportion to the value invested in the enterprise. A corporation has no moral and should have no legal right to water its stock or to capitalize its surplus earnings, and so impose extra prices and stifle other industries. Such entangled problems cannot be solved by demagogues, but by men who have been educated to logical thought and careful discrimination. But yet another theme of less signification and intense interest is the controversy between Church and State. In our land of freedom it is no trivial fact that the Church to whose communion one-twelfth of its people have pledged obedience and support claims to its dicta the supreme allegiance, not of its membership only, but of the State as a subordinate ordination. This question is to-day stirring the foundation stones of Europe, and soon the thunderbolt will be hurled upon us. When the time is ripe the power which has already struck at our common schools will not hesitate to subvert the government. Such questions as these, then, fall to the lot of the scholar to solve, and the past proves that scholarly attainments enhance the intellectual force and effectiveness of men in all the higher departments of labor.

The demand of the age is for practical education. Seneca and Socrates, without the Bible, would have made but poor theologians. All the learning of Greece, without a knowledge of living men and things, could never have produced "Hamlet" or "David Copperfield."

It is hard, very hard, for one conscious of integrity and purity of purpose to be misconceived and driven out, like Juan, into a storm of detraction and malediction. But you can stand alone with God and wait for justice. The genius which the Greeks devoted to philosophy and art have been given to science. The wealth which Rome lavished upon her temples has been devoted to the development of resources and to the homes of the people. May wealth rise into the marvels of art and our broad domains be covered with the homes of a virtuous and happy people, and may the future of the Republic be as extraordinary and unsullied as its past has been glorious.

UNION COLLEGE.

INAUGURATION OF THE COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES—THE ALUMNI DINNER—CONFERRING OF DEGREES—CLASS DAY AND THE PRIZES.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., June 23, 1875.

The Commencement of Union College was inaugurated on Sunday by a sermon by Dr. Booth, of New York, on "Self-Love and Self-Sacrifice." Pierson was elected President of the Alumni Association, Alex. J. Thomson Vice President and Thomas Featherstonhaugh Secretary. A communication was read from Professor Foster, now in Paris, saying that his health was never better, and that he was anxious to return to his work in the college. After the Alumni meeting the annual Alumni banquet was held in the gymnasium. Four hundred dollars were contributed by the meeting in aid of the Union boat crew at Saratoga. In the afternoon the ST. MARY'S COLLEGE.

THE CARDINAL VISITING HIS ALMA MATER—GREAT ENTHUSIASM AMONG THE CLERGY AND STUDENTS.

EMMETTSBURG, June 23, 1875.

Mount St. Mary's College, one of the most famous Catholic institutions of learning in America, is located in a beautiful valley at the foot of Carrick's Knob, a small mountain detached from the Catoctin range of the Blue Ridge. Early in the century Father Dubois, one of those indefatigable French missionaries whose zeal and industry are felt to this day in many portions of this country, bought a tract of land in the vicinity of Emmettsburg, Md., and established an ecclesiastical seminary. A few primitive but compactly built log huts served this pioneer and his associates, and one of the original buildings of sturdy logs and plaster yet remains to attest the strength with which they builded, but the foresight of these early workers in the vineyard has been long since demonstrated by the erection of elaborate stone edifices, spacious, roomy and capable of accommodating a much larger number of students than have ever yet tested their capacity. The grounds, which were then a wilderness, have been subjected to the skilful manipulations of the landscape gardener; the woods, stripped of their tangled underbrush, spread out in verdant lawns for the delectation of the student, and the well tilled fields groan under the weight of fruit, grain and vegetables, literally producing the "corn, wine and oil that gladden the heart of man." The old church on the brow of the knob, erected under the supervision of Father Dubois, subsequently Bishop of New York, is excellently preserved. It is built of stone and dressed over with plaster, and is used for all Sunday and extra services, a small chapel in one of the new buildings being used during the week for the ordinary services. Mount St. Mary's, founded as an elementary school for the education of priests, soon enlarged its sphere of usefulness, and in 1836 it was chartered as a college and empowered by the State of Maryland to confer degrees. Many of the most prominent citizens of this and the neighboring States constitute its alumni, and as a fashioner of ecclesiastical dignitaries it has not his equal in this country. Among its distinguished graduates are Archbishop Hughes, of New York (deceased); Archbishop Purcell, of Cincinnati; Bishops Whelan, of Wheeling (deceased); Loughlin, of Brooklyn, and Becker, of Wilmington; Archbishop Wood, of Philadelphia; Bishops Elder, of Natchez; Quinlan, of Mobile; Gilmour, of Cleveland; McCloskey, of Louisville, brother of the President; Fitzgerald, of Little Rock; Conroy, of Albany; McFarland, of Hartford (deceased); Corrigan, of Newark; Quasters, of Chicago (deceased); Gartland, of Savannah (deceased); Dubois, of New York, and Bruté, of Vincennes, the two latter founders of the institution, both deceased, and many other remarkable prelates, among whom may be mentioned Father Hickey, of Baltimore; Father Sourin, the renowned Jesuit, and Father James Mullen, of New Orleans, whom General Butler threatened to send to Fort Lafayette during the war. But a greater than these has arisen to give dignity and honor to his alma mater. America's first prince of the Church, Cardinal McCloskey, was educated at Mount St. Mary's, and many are the pleasurable traditions and anecdotes current in this locality of his amiability, goodness and absolute fitness for the hat he wears so well. Mount St. Mary's is not without its war record. In 1861 a number of Southern students were suddenly cut off from home and friends. They were cared for by the college authorities, their wants supplied and their education completed. When the mighty armies approached Gettysburg in '64 the college was in their line of march. No soldier of either side went on his way to death or glory, athirst or enhungered. The college larder was thrown open to all alike, and freely they partook of its hospitalities. The boys from the South—many of them that is to say—saw their opportunity and they seized it. With an enthusiasm which only boys can know they rushed into the ranks beside their comrades, and not a few "moaned out the death rattle" on that field which buried forever the hopes of Southern independence. The professors and students from the top of the mountain witnessed the onset of the two armies, and the reverberations of the guns rolled through the hills and over the valleys with startling distinctness, calling sadly to mind the probable fate of the buoyant young Southerners whose amiable traits and chivalrous natures had securely entwined them about the hearts of these noble and self-sacrificing fathers.

Rev. John McCloskey, D. D., is at present President of the college. He was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., and has been here ever since he was fourteen years old. At his first coming there was but one stone building on the premises and a few log huts. Emmettsburg, one of those remarkable towns whose existence cannot be accounted for by any known laws, which spring up nobody knows how and which flourish nobody knows why, was then as large as it is now, and it may fairly be presumed was a place of far more commercial importance, as it was on the direct road from Pittsburg to Baltimore, and a favorite rallying point for the cumbersome Conestoga wagons which then lumbered up and down the sides of the Blue Ridge and the Alleghanies. Father McCloskey took his degree of A. B. in 1835 and was ordained by Bishop Hughes in 1840. If the boys of 1875 were suddenly permitted to behold their predecessors of '35 they would be apt to rebel against the extraordinary curtailment of their privileges. It was customary in those days for each student to be provided with his rifle or shotgun and powder horn, and many an antlered buck bowed low his stately head before the schoolboy's unerring aim. Dr. McCaffrey, at present emeritus President, and Cardinal McCloskey were both prefects over him. In 1841 Father McCloskey was made Vice President and Treasurer, which positions he filled with eminent usefulness and wisdom until the declining years of Dr. McCaffrey induced him to seek the repose to which his labors as President entitled him, and Father McCloskey reigned in his stead. A single glance at the bright happy faces of the 160 students of the institution will convince the most sceptical of the esteem which Father McCloskey enjoys, and his hearty welcome and genuine kindness of heart as well as his perfect courtesy, attest that the mantle of Elijah has fallen upon Elisha.

Cardinal McCloskey, mindful of the claims of his Alma Mater and aware, doubtless, of the delight he would confer upon the college, the fountain from whence he drained the inspiration that has made him what he is, left New York Monday in the limited express for Mount St. Mary's, accompanied by Mgr. Roncetti and Dr. Ubaldi, Papal Ablegates; Bishop Loughland, of Brooklyn; Bishop Becker, of Wilmington (the two latter alumni of Mount St. Mary's), and the following priests, also alumni of the College:—Rev. Jeremiah Griffin, Manhattanville, New York; Rev. Michael Curran, St. Andrew's church, New York; Rev. James Duffy, Syracuse, N. Y.; Rev. Eugene McSherry, Hempstead, Long Island; Rev. Henry McDowell, New York; Rev. John Kearney, New York; Rev. Charles McCready, New York; Dr. McGlynn, Twenty-eighth street church, New York; Rev. William Cook, Philadelphia; Rev. H. L. Wright, Philadelphia; Rev. James A. Miller, Philadelphia; Rev. Martin Fallon, Wilmington, Del.; Rev. George Kelley, Brandywine, Del.; Rev. Michael Macaleer, New York; Rev. P. Costigan, New York; also Rev. John Farley, Secretary to the Cardinal; Rev. Eugene Cassidy, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Rev. Thomas Dolan, Albany; Rev. H. L. Wright, Philadelphia; Dr. Bowley, St. Johns, N. F.; Rev. Morris Hickey, Flushing, L. I. The following members of the Alumni accompanied the prelates:—Edward M. Reiley, New Jersey; Walter Stauffer, New Orleans; Joseph G. Stewart, Jamaica, L. I.; John B. Head, Latrobe, Pa.; William J. Fitzpatrick, Jersey City; Porter Morse, New Orleans; Joseph M. Carter, Vevay, Ind.; George B. McCloskey, New York, and the party was joined in Baltimore city by Myers R. Jones, Charles R. Cangby and Christopher Conley. When the train reached Baltimore it was met by a delegation from the Cathedral and the dignitaries of the Church dined at the Archiepiscopal residence. At four o'clock they embarked for Mount St. Mary's, over the Western Maryland Railroad, and had an opportunity of inspecting at the most favorable season the wild and beautiful scenery along the line of that road. The Cardinal's party reached Mechanicstown about eight o'clock and were received by Father McMurdie, Vice President of the college, and Father Guedrie, Superior of St. Joseph's and the Order of the Sisters of Charity in America. The unwonted honor of a visit from a prince of the Church was not without its effect at Mount St. Mary's. It was the feeling of a mother who has sent her son out, an unknown lad, without friends or influence, to push his fortune in the world and has had him returned to her after many years laden with riches and honors. All seemed to participate in the natural pride and joy—from the little fellow who had just escaped from the leading strings of his mother to the genial, smiling, rosy-faced President, who, though up to his eyes in business, appeared always to have a kindly word for the numerous and sometimes vexatious callers and news hunters. It was certainly a great event in the history of the college, and worthily they intended to recognize it. There was hurrying to and fro and giving of commands, orders and counter orders flew thick and fast, and numberless wild rumors of the approach of the distinguished guest, with his retinue magnified to hundreds and thousands, served to inflame the excited feelings of both professors and students.

About four o'clock in the afternoon "Old Bill," a colored individual, an institution of the college, whom a former owner had deeded to the faculty in default of his son's "bill," over due, drove up to the front of the main building, arrayed for the great occasion in the blackest of coats, the shiniest of tiles and the whitest of gloves. He had lived here, man and boy, many a year, and now his whiskers were silvered with age; but it is doubtful whether his dusky features ever shone with more real pride and happiness than when he pulled a veritable crimson bandanna from some inner recess and brushed the moisture from his brow. He held well in hand two splendid dark brown horses, and the metropolis itself could scarcely have furnished a handsomer or more stylish equipage for His Eminence. Later in the afternoon the students were all marshalled in front of the main building, and then there took place a species of drill in which the worthy President was not an adept. Many of the boys were small and looked upon it as a piece of fun. When told to come up in the centre they incontinently backed to the rear, and when requested to fall back on the extreme left they managed to place their mischievous little bodies in positions that would have broken the hearts of military tacticians. Finally, however, with the assistance of professors and seminarians, the lines were properly dressed, the front of the college was brilliantly illuminated and all was ready for the reception. Professor Dielman, the professor of music at the college, visited Baltimore three weeks ago at the earnest solicitation of the President, and purchased a number of brass instruments. Dr. McCloskey said he wanted at least to receive the Cardinal with the tune of "Auld Lang Syne."

Since then the Professor has worked night and day to form a band worthy of the occasion, and the result was a series of performances that would do credit to many more practical organizations. About nine o'clock the bells rang out a joyful peal, and the Cardinal's carriage drove rapidly to the steps of the first terrace in front of the college. His Eminence was assisted to the ground by the President and his deputies, and as he advanced through the lines the whole concourse, students, visitors, ladies and gentlemen, knelt and received his blessing, distinctly audible, but pronounced with a faltering voice, as though a flood of recollections were surging up and striving for the mastery. The invocation was followed by three times three of the most hearty cheers from the professors and students it has ever been the writer's fortune to hear, and immediately the band struck up "Hail to the Chief," and played it well. As the Cardinal entered the President's parlor the band, composed of nine pieces, rendered with singularly pleasing effect "Auld Lang Syne," and the gratified smile which played over the features of this great son of the Church told how highly he cherished the recollections of his early years. Soon the assemblage separated and the visiting clergy were assigned quarters for the night. At seven o'clock in the morning the students, college teachers and neighborhood congregation assembled in the church on the mountain to witness the celebration of private Pontifical mass by the Cardinal. St. Mary's church, alluded to above, is unique in appearance, being built in the shape of a cross, nearly three-quarters of a century ago. It is surmounted by a belfry, in which is placed a very beautiful statue of the Blessed Virgin and Child. The graveyard adjoining is tastefully decorated with natural flowers, and in the northwest corner of the cemetery is the vault of the Tiers family, in which reposes the remains of George H. Miles, of Baltimore, the playwright, poet and essayist, the incumbent of the chair of English Literature at Mount St. Mary's, now worthily filled by Professor Ernest La Garde, of Louisiana, the author of a number of valuable works. Professor Miles' most important additions to American literature are his drama of "Signior Valiente," an admirable criticism of "Hamlet," some meritorious fugitive pieces of poetry and a number of burlesques. Tiers was his father-in-law. The vault is a handsome affair, surrounded by rare and beautiful evergreens, and on a level with the pavement is a small but exquisitely finished oratory. From the front of St. Mary's church an admirable view of the valley below is obtained on a clear morning—a miniature panorama of mountain scenery, which well repays the slight exertions of the traveller in reaching the plateau. Cardinal McCloskey entered the church in his zucchetto (skull cap), mozetta and rochetto. His chaplains (cappellani) were Rev. John A. Watterson, Professor of Theology in the college, and Rev. John O'Brien, Professor of Sacred Literature in the same institution. A cardinal in case of necessity may celebrate mass with but one chaplain, but it is not usual to perform the ceremony without the aid of two. The difference between a bishop's and cardinal's mass consists in the appellation of eminentissimo in the latter in the offertory, when the chaplain asks His Eminence to bless the water which is to be infused in the chalice. The berretta is not worn during the mass, but Cardinal McCloskey has the privilege by dispensation of wearing the zucchetto during the less solemn part of the mass, a privilege enjoyed by no other bishops or priests in America. He wears it from the psalm of entrance (introito) to the preface and from the end of the communion to the end of the Gospel of St. John. During the most solemn part of the mass, or the canon, as it is termed, this privilege is extended to no priest in existence, not even to the Holy Father himself, save to the priests in China. The Chinese exhibit an utter abhorrance of a bare head, and by special dispensation of Paul II. this rare privilege was granted to the missionaries in that country. After the celebration of the mass the carriage of the Cardinal drove to the front entrance of the church, with "Old Billy" on the box, a broad smile suffusing his face from ear to ear, and the gloss of his tile not in the least dimmed by the service of the previous night. Evidently this is the great event of Billy's life, and hereafter, like the Romans, from the building of the city (A. U. C.), he will date his reminiscences from the advent of the Cardinal. His Eminence, arrayed in his scarlet robes and wearing the berretta, passed through the throng assembled to greet him. All removed their hats, in token of reverence, and the general sentiment appeared to be that the Holy Father had chosen a worthy representative in America.

A preliminary meeting of the Association of the Alumni took place during the forenoon, to arrange the business to be transacted at night. Many of the old graduates being expected on the train the regular meeting was deferred to as late an hour as possible, to accommodate them.

The farewell matinée of the Juniors of Mount St. Mary's College took place yesterday afternoon at four o'clock. The Juniors acquitted themselves with credit and were warmly applauded by the audience, many of whom were the friends and relatives of the youthful aspirants.

Father John McCloskey, president of the college, received at the commencement the insignia of the doctorate from Georgetown College, Father Young having been commissioned as the bearer of the ring and berretta. The berretta of doctors differs from that of all other ecclesiastics. It has four corners instead of three. The three corners symbolize the Blessed Trinity, and the four form a perfect cross, and indicate the plenitude of ecclesiastical science in the wearer. It was not until the thirteenth century that the four-cornered berretta was peculiarly set apart as a portion of the insignia of doctors of divinity. The first official account we have of the tradition of this distinctive mark was in the time of Peter Lombard, Archbishop of Paris, called in the language of the Church magister sententiarum. The color of the doctor's berretta varied with the different colleges. The Sarbonne, in Paris, usually conferred purple berrettas, while the colleges of Salamanca and Cimbra confined themselves to the black. Apropos of this matter it may be well to state that the color of the berretta of all ecclesiastics under a cardinal is black. His Eminence alone has the privilege of wearing scarlet, a distinction conferred by Paul I. in 1460.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES.

To-day dawned auspiciously for the most momentous Commencement that Mount St. Mary's has ever celebrated. By nine o'clock the clouds were brushed from the mountain tops and the sun shed its glorious light to welcome her highly honored son of the Church. The excursion train from Baltimore brought a large number of Alumni, among whom were Hon. William Walsh, of Alleghany; Hon. John Ritchie, of Frederick; Hon. J. Carroll Brent, of Washington; William P. Preston, of Baltimore; Henry McShane, the great bell founder of the same city, and Leo Knott and Outerbridge Horsey, of Frederick, and a number of other distinguished graduates and friends of the institution. The delegation from Baltimore was accompanied by the band from Fort McHenry. They formed in line and, headed by the band, marched into the hall with a triumphal entry. Shortly afterward the seminarians entered, followed by the prelates, priests, bishops and last, in his scarlet robes, with the golden and velvet cross about his neck, the Cardinal. On the right was John McCloskey, President of Mount St. Mary's, and on the left Bishop Lynch, of Charleston. Amid perfect thunders of applause from the immense mass of people congregated His Eminence took his seat under a crimson canopy, the back of which was decorated with a white satin ground, containing, on green leaves, the names of the bishops who claimed Mount St. Mary's as their Alma Mater. Immediately in front was suspended a crimson bouquet interspersed with the Papal colors, the gift of a metropolitan journal. After the applause had subsided Father John McCloskey advanced to the edge of the stand and introduced Father Sourin, S. J. The oration of the day, the address of Father Sourin, the orator, was frequently and rapturously applauded.

FATHER M'CLOSKEY'S DEGREES.

When the students finished their speeches, which were very creditable, embracing a variety of subjects, Father Young, of Georgetown College, in a neat speech, conferred the degree of LL. D. upon Father John McCloskey, who replied appropriately in a Latin address.

Father John McCaffery, the oldest living representative of the Dubois and Burtee régime, was called upon to deliver the premiums and honors.

The audience was clamorous for a speech, and Father McCaffery said that this was the most unprecedented event in the history of the college. We had here a man, a graduate of this institution, who founded St. John's College, at Fordham; he had organized dozens of institutions besides; he was invited to all; they were splendid institutions; he came here to his mother, preferring the usage of the college to the splendid invitations that were extended to him elsewhere. I stand here to-day, he continued, as the representative of a former generation; it is hardly yet become popular to boast of being a Marylander. We were unfortunate in the last war, but I am proud of my nativity. The little village of Emmitsburg produced me. The State of Maryland was the first to recognize political freedom, and God grant that she may be the last to ignore those principles which were the foundation of her glory. I am a Marylander, and, I trust, a citizen of the United States, and I thank God that I am enabled to greet you all to-day as fellow citizens.

The degrees were conferred on Father McCloskey, all under supervision of the Cardinal, after which the prizes were awarded. When the last boy had departed with his load Cardinal McCloskey, in response to a general call, came forward. His reprisal was received with tremendous enthusiasm, and it was some moments before he could make his voice heard. He then in happy terms alluded to the gratification it gave him to be present once more at the home of his early college days, and said that if in the dignity conferred upon him the Church had been honored, what place in the Church has a right to claim the largest share in that honor than Mount St. Mary's College? I am indebted, he continued, to this seminary more than to any other institution here or elsewhere for what I was, what I am and what I may be, with God's help, in the days to come.

ALLEGHENY COLLEGE.

INAUGURATION OF DR. BUGBEE AS PRESIDENT OF THE COLLEGE.

MEADVILLE, PA., June 23, 1875.

The inauguration exercises took place this evening in the First Methodist church. The address of welcome was delivered by ex-President George Loomis, D. D.; the oath of office was administered by Mr. Walter H. Lowrie, the presentation of keys by President Bradley, the address to the faculty by Dr. Hamnett, the address to the alumni by Dr. Hill and the charge to the President by Bishop R. S. Foster. The inaugural address dealt with the general question of education with great fullness and clearness, and closed with reference to the admission of ladies as students and to the future of the college.

THE COLLEGE OF NEW YORK.

EXERCISES YESTERDAY BY THE GRADUATING CLASS—HUMOROUS HISTORY OF THE CLASS.

The graduating class of the College of the City of New York initiated yesterday an annual series of class exercises. These began at three o'clock in the afternoon and were held in the college chapel. This fine devotional hall was tastefully decorated with the national flag. The President's desk was also covered by the American national ensign, and a large basket of damask and white roses was placed on the top. The body of the chapel was well filled by a large assemblage of fashionably dressed people, ladies being greatly in the majority. The students looked their best, and acted like young men who had interesting roles to play. None of the college faculty were present.

The Committee of Arrangements was composed of A. Goldsmith, Howard R. Bark, James T. Harper, Henry E. Jenkins, James McCreery; Grand Marshal, Spencer G. McNary; Deputies, Charles J. Henry, James M. Smith, J. V. V. Olcott, Alerick H. Mann, Charles C. Protheroe, Leigh H. Hunt. The President of the class, Hanford Crawford, was in the chair and delivered an address. The class oration was delivered by Louis Werner. The subject was, "The Progress and Uses of Learning." The oration was carefully prepared, and was delivered gracefully.

After the introduction to the second part (from Offenbach's "Orphee") had been played, the class poem was delivered by Abraham Goldsmith. It treated of "Forgotten Realities." A cornet solo was then executed, and then that important personage, was introduced in the person of Henry E. Jenkins.

THE PROPHET OF THE DAY,

PLANTING THE IVY.

The ivy will be planted at twelve o'clock to-night in the college campus. A torchlight procession will be had. The ivy orator is George N. Messiter. Some of the College Faculty are to be serenaded.

ANNUAL COMMENCEMENT OF ST. MARY'S SEMINARY.

The first annual commencement of the St. Mary's Seminary, at Bayview, Providence, R. I., will take place on the 30th inst. The seminary, which is under the control of the Sisters of Mercy, has only been in existence in its present beautiful situation, on Narragansett Bay, for about twelve months. All the young ladies and children now being educated at this delightful spot look forward with the most pleasurable anticipations to the first annual commencement.

THE NORMAL COLLEGE.

Some of the results of the examination of the graduating class of the Normal College were announced yesterday. That is, the young ladies have passed, and those who have failed were informed of their fate. Miss Betsy B. Davis came out number one, and will have the privilege of delivering the valedictory. There are twelve young ladies who have received an average of ninety-five per cent of marks or over. The main feature of the day, however, was the competitive examinations in elocution and music. Miss Mary MacFarlane, who recited Waller's "Spanish Duel," won in the first contest; and Miss Mary Zeitzmann won in the second. On Tuesday there were two similar examinations in physics and physiology. The winner in the first subject was Miss Betsy B. Davis, and in the second Miss Edith G. Bowes. It is not yet known when the results of the regular collegiate examination will be announced.

INSTITUTION FOR THE DEAF AND DUMB.

The closing day of the New York Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, consisting of an exhibition of the skill attained by the school, took place yesterday at the splendid building of the institution, Manhattanville. There were 537 pupils in the Home last year, of whom 300 were boys. The examinations concluded on Tuesday, and the closing day was more of a reception than an examination. About 350 visitors attended.

The following was the programme of the exercises:—

Remarks by the Principal, Rev. J. L. Peet, D. D. Illustrations of visible speech. Exercises of the high class under the instruction of Professor John H. Pettingell. Vocal salutatory—Bernard Clark. Written themes on topics in astronomy—Misses Barragher, Barry, Bonnell, Dickinson, Jones and Murphy. Demonstration of processes in human physiology—Martin Brown. Written answers to miscellaneous questions proposed by the audience—Bernard Clark, Martin Brown, James B. Doane, Jonathan H. Eddy, John Hogan and Stephen Sinclair. Recitation in signs of "Warren's Address to His Soldiers at the Battle of Bunker Hill"—James E. Doran. Valedictory address—Jonathan H. Eddy. Report of the examination of the high class by the Rev. Samuel Hall, D. D. Remarks by Hon. Frederic De Peyster, LL. D., and report on the general examination of the pupils. Distribution of the honors.

The following were the boys and girls who received the honors:—

Misses Clacket, Clum, Fenn, Goodman, Horton, Kelley, Lawton and Sawer.

Masters Adner, Clark, Codeman, King, Mahrlein, Myers, Scott, Sherbut, Welsh, Willets and Brown.

The institution is supported by the State, and is self sustaining also to an extent. The expenses for the year were $159,296 96. A more beautiful location for such a school could not be selected. It looks clear upon the Hudson, the entire buildings covering two acres of ground. The surrounding grounds extend to thirty acres. Much of the beauty of the grounds belongs to the good taste of Mr. Chauncey D. Little, who has done his best to extend their facilities for planting purposes. This gentleman being also steward of the house, it is credited to him by all the friends of the institution that his ability, tact and forbearance have done much over a period of fourteen years to combat all the difficulties that beset it at the early period of its existence. The exercises closed with prayer and benediction.

MRS. WEILS' SEMINARY.

The eighth annual reception at Mrs. Leopold Weils' Seminary, which is located at No. 11 West Forty-ninth street, took place yesterday afternoon. A select assemblage was present. Eighty scholars took part in the very interesting exercises. Diplomas and medals were distributed among twenty-nine young girls. The graduating class consisted of Misses Amelia Arkrush, Carrie C. Stiner (daughter of Excise Commissioner Stiner), Ida Doctor, Hannah Bien, Pauline Bachoman, Dora Stein and Louisa Frier.

OTHER INSTITUTIONS.

Van Norman institute, Nos. 71, 73 and 75 East Sixty-first street, held its graduating exercises last evening in the Madison avenue Reformed church. Miss Cecilia Tibbits delivered the "Salutatis," essays were read by Misses Fannie Crooks, Emma Croft, Eva Hastings, Ida Ash, Selina Morris, Addie Jaffray and Cecilia Tibbits. Rev. Dr. William M. Taylor made an address. Miss Laura Whittemore pronounced the valedictory, and after the conferring of diplomas the school joined in a parting hymn written by Miss Jaffray.

St. Patrick's School, at St. Patrick's Hall, No. 272 Mulberry street, held its closing exercises before the summer vacation last evening. The entertainment was enjoyed by a large number of the friends of the pupils, and the performances elicited frequent and hearty applause. Prizes and rewards were awarded to and distributed among the most proficient pupils. De La Salle Orchestra and St. Patrick's choir lent music's aid to the pleasures of the occasion.

COMMENCEMENTS TO-DAY.

The Graduating Class of the Long Island College Hospital invite their friends to attend the sixteenth Commencement exercises of that institution at the Brooklyn Academy of Music this evening. Degrees will be conferred by Dr. Theo. L. Mason, President of the Collegiate Department. Prizes will be awarded by Dr. Samuel G. Armor, Dean of the Faculty. Mr. John G. Saxe will deliver the oration, and Dr. E. C. Dudley, of the Graduating Class, will pronounce the valedictory. Music will be furnished by Conterno's Twenty-third Regiment Band.

St. John's College, Brooklyn, celebrates its Commencement to-day.

St. Ann's parochial school's Commencement services will take place to-day in the large hall of the Cooper Union.

Grammar School No. 59, situated in East Fifty-seventh street, holds its closing exercises this afternoon, at two o'clock, under the able direction of the veteran instructor John Boyle, principal, with an efficient corps of assistants.

The annual exhibition and closing exercises by the young lady pupils and young gentlemen connected with the Girard Institute, which is located at No. 35 East Sixty-second street, will take place this evening, at eight o'clock. The Girard Institute is a noble institution, in which the French language is taught, with all the other branches, and Professor Girard and a number of other gentlemen connected with education will make addresses.

INDIAN SUPPLIES.

THE CONTRACTS AWARDED FOR THE ENSUING YEAR.

There was a meeting of the Commissioners of Indian Affairs at the depository of Indian goods, No. 82 White street, yesterday, at which the bids for supplies were opened and the contracts for the next year awarded. The Indian Board consists of General Clinton B. Fisk, President; E. A. Haight, E. P. Smith and E. M. Kingsley, all of New York; General H. H. Sibley, of Minnesota; B. R. Roberts, of Maryland; A. C. Barstow, of Rhode Island, and F. H. Smith, of Washington, Secretary of the Board. A quorum of this body was present.

There are now seventy agencies among the 14,000 Indians in the United States, all of which receive their supplies through this Board. The agencies are generally filled by appointees recommended by the missionary societies of the various religious organizations of the country. To this rule there are three notable exceptions.

The Indian appropriations made at the last session of Congress aggregate $6,100,000, of which amount $2,500,000 is to be disbursed in the shape of goods and stores, $1,500,000 in beef and $1,000,000 in cash and special gifts. This leaves a balance of $1,000,000, which will be employed in "covering the shorts" of this year's appropriation. There is generally a deficiency existing. Such a custom seems to have become the tradition of the Indian Bureau, and it is always made good out of the next succeeding appropriation.

Vast quantities of samples offered by contractors were examined and entire lists of supplies purchased. The prices at which the chief articles were contracted for will be found below:—

THE JERSEY BALLOT CONSPIRATORS.

DECISIVE ACTION OF THE SUPREME COURT IN WICKHAM'S CASE.

One of the acts of the ballot conspirators in Jersey City after the late charter election was the unseating of Mr. Wickham, who was elected a member of the Board of Chosen Freeholders. The canvassers awarded the seat to Mr. Van Horn, who was duly sworn in. Mr. Wickham took immediate steps to secure his seat, and the case was submitted to the Supreme Court at Trenton. Mr. Abbett, counsel for Wickham, prayed the Court to give a decision as early as possible during the present term in view of the flagrant injustice done his client. The decision was rendered yesterday, and the Court restored Mr. Wickham to his seat. That gentleman was thereupon sworn in, and his bonds were approved by Judge Knapp. He will take his seat at the next meeting of the Board.

TRIPLE SHEET.

NEW YORK, THURSDAY, JUNE 24, 1875.

THE HERALD FOR THE SUMMER RESORTS.

TO NEWSDEALERS AND THE PUBLIC:—

THE NEW YORK HERALD will run a special train every Sunday during the season, commencing July 4, between New York, Niagara Falls, Saratoga, Lake George, Sharon and Richfield Springs, leaving New York at half-past two o'clock A. M., arriving at Saratoga at nine o'clock A. M., and Niagara Falls at a quarter to two P. M., for the purpose of supplying the SUNDAY HERALD along the line. Newsdealers and others are notified to send in their orders to the HERALD office as early as possible.

From our reports this morning the probabilities are that the weather to-day will be warmer and clear or partly cloudy.

Persons going out of town for the summer can have the daily and Sunday HERALD mailed to them, free of postage, for $1 per month.

WALL STREET YESTERDAY.—Stocks were stronger, under the lead of Pacific Mail, Western Union and Lake Shore. Gold receded to 117⅛. Money was quoted as usual.

IF THE LEADERS of Tammany Hall imagine that John Morrissey will prematurely throw up the sponge they show their ignorance of the most prominent points in that distinguished statesman's career.

THE BENEFIT of Mr. Thomas at the Central Park Garden was a marked event in the history of music, and in all respects a worthy compliment to one who has deserved well of the community.

THE BEECHER CASE.—Mr. Beach has closed his argument. We print this morning the affidavits of the witnesses whose evidence was published in the HERALD a few days since. A motion was made to reopen the case to admit this evidence. The Judge reserved his decision. We trust Judge Neilson will see his way to admit this evidence. If true, it decides the case. If untrue, the parties who swore to the affidavits should go to prison.

A CATHOLIC ARMY.—The representative of the Pope in Madrid is pressing his advantages with the new Spanish government. The last point is that the government should recognize the army officially as "Catholic." It is thought that the King will concede this point. Considering that the lightest attribute of the Head of the Church is that of "Prince of Peace" it would occur to our secular mind that the less the Pope has to do with "Catholic" armies the better for the welfare of the Catholic Church.

RELIGIOUS CONTROVERSIES.—We are afraid of this despatch from Berlin about riots caused by the ultramontanists in the town of Rhein, East Prussia. The Extreme Church influence in Germany has never been strong enough to lead to open outbreaks. If there are any difficulties they arise from the efforts of the Prussian government to enforce the unpopular religious laws. The worst comment that can be made upon the modern German Empire is that it is necessary to strengthen it by religious oppression. The world will really believe in a united Germany when they can see Germany strong enough to tolerate under its flag all religions.

COMMENCEMENT DAY is commemorated in our columns this morning in many narratives of varied interest. These Commencement days should be festivals in our modern life. They celebrate the new generation going out to do battle in the great strife that lies before them. It is the new generation treading in the footsteps of the one who goes before—even of our own. And as we read these speeches and take part in these ceremonies and hear the voices of these light, cheery multitudes, eagerly hurrying into the combat, we feel as though they were the echoes of the future; the steady, firm tread of the men who are to do our work when we are gone—to do it well or ill as God may give them strength. May God's blessing rest with them, and may all their years be as sunny as these Commencement days, with their endeavors, their achievements and their high-mounting hopes!

The Republic in France.

As might have been expected, the Assembly in France have encountered stormy weather in discussing the bill defining the powers of the President. The great difficulty in founding a republic in France is in the adjustment of the habits of the French people and the traditions of French authority to the new state of affairs. The French have been for a thousand years under royal drill. The genius of French jurists and statesmen has been devoted to disciplining France so that it might be an obedient vassal of the crown. Consequently centralization has become so fixed that the nation responds to the will of the ruler in Paris as the electric wires respond to the touch of the operator in the central office. The effort of the republicans has been to destroy this centralization by giving authority to the departments, to the communes, to the assemblies, and by limiting the power of the chief magistrate. The effort of the royalists has been to make the Presidency as much as possible a copy of the throne. These royalists conceded the Republic under a strong duress, and now that they have founded it their effort in passing the laws upon which it is to be run is to retain every emblem of the monarchy or the empire.

We observe that M. Louis Blanc, the austere and illustrious historian of the Republic, one of the conspicuous figures of France who accepted this republican declaration a few months ago with protests, reluctance and only under the urgency of his associates, has opposed the bill because "it gives royal prerogatives to the President and tends to the restoration of the monarchy." With all our respect for M. Louis Blanc we should take his criticisms upon affairs in France with a caution which foreign observers of our institutions should pay to the criticisms of men like Wendell Phillips. The issue Louis Blanc discusses is very much like what was discussed at the foundation of our government. We had this same question of a Presidency in name or a Presidency in fact. Some of the wisest and purest men in the time of the Revolution were as anxious to make the Presidential office as strong, overmastering and definite as the royalists in France. Others, like Thomas Jefferson, took the ground of Louis Blanc. The question for a long time definitely marked the earlier political divisions of the Republic. Mr. Benton in his "Thirty Years' View" refers to a conversation that he had with the celebrated Rufus King, one of the noblest characters in our history, the friend of Washington and one of the first Senators in Congress from New York, who was high enough in the confidence of Washington to receive the nomination to the office of Secretary of State. Senator Benton in 1826, just before the death of this worthy and illustrious citizen, says, in speaking of Mr. King:—"In one of our conversations, and upon the formation of the constitution in the Federal Convention of 1787, he said some things to me which, I think, ought to be remembered by future generations to enable them to appreciate justly those founders of our government who were in favor of a stronger organization than was adopted. He said:—'You, young men, who have been born since the Revolution, look with horror upon the name of a king and upon all propositions for a strong government. It was not so with us. We were born the subjects of a king, and were accustomed to subscribe ourselves "His Majesty's most faithful subjects," and we began the quarrel which ended in the Revolution, not against the King, but against his Parliament; and in making the new government many propositions were submitted which would not bear discussion and ought not to be quoted against their authors, being offered for consideration and to bring out opinions, and which, though behind the opinions of this day, were in advance of those of that day.' These things were said chiefly in relation to General Hamilton, who had submitted propositions stronger than those adopted, but nothing like those which party spirit attributed to him. I heard these words, I hope, with profit, and commit them, in the same hope, to after generations."

It would be a fatal blunder for the French republicans to allow any difference of opinion as to the powers of the President to paralyze the efforts of those who have succeeded after so many misfortunes in securing to France this beneficent form of government. M. Buffet, in discussing the bill in the Assembly on Tuesday, said, properly enough, that its conditions "were necessary to place the Executive in harmony with French customs and traditions." We do not believe in strong governments of any kind, and especially under a democracy. The change from a government like that to which France has been accustomed for centuries to democracy on the principle of Switzerland or America would be so violent that it would necessarily end in ruin. M. Thiers, speaking of the difficulties surrounding his Presidency and defending what seemed to be a temporizing policy in dealing with the Republic, said that we must eat the artichoke leaf by leaf. This advice will hold good to-day. What the republicans in France want is a Republic. Time will surely harmonize the conditions and customs of the French people with the new form of government. The difficulty with all republican experiments in Europe thus far has been that the men who led them were too enthusiastic, and although honest, almost visionary. They aimed to do in a day the work of years. It was the aspirations of the early republicans at the fall of the Bastile which ran into the wild ways of the Reign of Terror and brought down that beautiful fabric of free government into shameful and irretrievable ruin. We had the same trouble in Spain. The fanatics under the lead of Pi y Margall endeavored to realize in a month all the dreams that had been lingering in their memories for a lifetime. Thus far the French republicans have avoided this rock, because they have been controlled by as conservative a statesman as M. Thiers, and as wise a politician as M. Gambetta. It will be the effort of the imperialists and monarchists to ruin the Republic upon some such rock as this bill for the public powers. They can only succeed by exciting men like Louis Blanc and those who act with him to break the republican party.

The success of the Republic in France is menaced by many animosities. The surrounding rulers do not like it. Republicanism in France means ultimately republicanism in Europe. If this great ingenious and enterprising people can succeed in identifying themselves with democracy and in founding a government that can live through the battle and storm as our own government has lived its influence will be felt in every royal household in Europe. Consequently we must not be surprised at any phase the opposition to democracy may assume. There are conditions within France, a standing army, an established Church, hereditary peerage, all of which are naturally opposed to a system which limits the army, dissolves the ties between Church and State and abolishes hereditary titles. In a country so susceptible to foreign influence as France, and whose home policy is controlled so largely by diplomacy, we can understand how urgently Germany and Russia, and even England will oppose the Republic. If they cannot directly antagonize it they will attempt to freeze it out of the European circles. They will give it an ill name; they will deny to France the prestige and influence that was formerly accorded to Napoleon and the Bourbons. The only way by which these difficulties can be avoided is by patience and moderation and justice. What the Republic wants is time—time to adjust France to the new conditions imposed upon it; time to recover from the heavy burdens of the recent war; time to renew her industries and adjust her system of taxation; time to show the world that republicanism in France does not necessarily mean anarchy; that the Republic after all is the surest safeguard for religion, morality and society, and that great as France has been under her kings and emperors, she has a still loftier greatness under the rule of her people.

Therefore, as our readers will see, the controversy in France is not a vital one. It is as difficult for the French people to accustom themselves to the spirit and forms of a republic as it was for our fathers, and the fact that there are conspicuous French republicans who believe in a strong Presidency should not militate against their patriotism or give us concern about the fate of the Republic. They are taking in France the same grounds taken by men as venerated as Alexander Hamilton and Rufus King.

The Coming Rifle Match.

Some idea of the nature of the contest that will take place on Friday next at Dollymount may be formed from the fact that such skilled marksmen as the Irish Henry Fulton and Mr. Rigby have failed to secure places on the team that is to uphold the honor of Ireland in the international contest. It is evident that the Irish marksmen are sternly bent on regaining the laurels lost in last year's contest at Creedmoor. Nothing is being allowed to stand in the way of the best men coming to the front. Unlike our Creedmoor marksmen, the Irish made the contest for places on their team a strictly national affair, and by inviting free competition have secured the very best men available for the work to be done. Should the men composing their team shoot in the match with anything like the accuracy they have displayed in the course of the competition it will require great efforts and very good luck to defeat them. We do not fear but that our men will do credit to their country; but the men they will have to meet at Dollymount seem to be very much more formidable than those who took part in the international contest at Creedmoor last year. Three of the highest scores on record have been made by gentlemen seeking a place on the Irish team. Two hundred and eighteen out of a possible two hundred and twenty-five is something unparalleled in the history of rifle shooting, and this is the score by which Mr. Johnson won his place on the Irish team. This score is equal to forty-three and a half bull's eyes out of a possible forty-five, and could scarcely be surpassed if the gun were fired from a fixed rest. The two next highest scores are two hundred and eight and two hundred and three. The former score made by Mr. McKenna is, as nearly as possible, equal to the splendid score made by Major Fulton on the old targets during the international match at Creedmoor. So wonderful was this score that riflemen were inclined to believe that it would not be equalled for many years, if ever. Experience has, however, shown this to be an error, and it may be that the riflemen of the future are destined to achieve such skill that nothing less than a succession of bull's eyes will be looked upon as first class marksmanship. One thing in relation to the coming struggle at Dollymount is certain—our riflemen will have opponents worthy of them, and at whose hands even defeat would not be without honor.

FRANCE AND THE CENTENNIAL.—The announcement that the République française, a Paris newspaper, the organ of Gambetta, has given one thousand francs for the purpose of sending delegates to the Philadelphia Centennial Exhibition is extremely gratifying, not so much from the amount contributed, but as an evidence of good feeling toward the Republic by the republican party in Paris. The value of the Centennial Exhibition will be in knitting these ties of personal friendship and sympathy. As the widow's mite in the coffers was of more value than the rich man's gift, so a single contribution like this, representing personal business interests, is a better illustration of the success of the Centennial than if the government of France had appropriated a million of francs.

THE CASE OF TWEED is still unsettled. His lawyers are strenuously endeavoring to rescue the Boss from the custody of the law. Would it not be well for the eminent counsel to advise their client to return to the city some of the millions which he stole from the treasury? This brazen thief must not be made a hero, nor must the lawyers, whose ingenuity is stimulated by the payment of large fees from the stolen public money, be permitted to cloud the essential fact that Tweed is the monumental thief of the age, and that restitution must come before mercy.

MODERN CIVILIZATION.—We observe in a French paper an account of a bull fight in Spain, in which two men were killed and a third so badly injured that he is not expected to live. It is strange that an amusement like this should linger in a country as civilized as Spain; that it should become really one of the institutions of the nation, and that these cruel and horrible accidents, instead of lessening its influence, really add to its attractions.

Terwilliger Wanted—The Rottenness of the Police.

The Assembly Committee, engaged in investigating the cause of the increase of crime in the city, are in want of Terwilliger. According to the evidence given by Sergeant John R. Groo, the amiable patrolman and ex-ward detective who bears the name of Terwilliger can give the committee some valuable information on the subject of panel houses and the manner in which they are run. Groo professes to have kept a diary while a sergeant in the Eighth precinct, then under the charge of Captain Williams, and this diary contains some interesting data in which Terwilliger is concerned. If Groo is to be believed Terwilliger, then the ward detective in Captain Williams' precinct, was principally engaged in the collection of a sort of tariff or infernal revenue tax, levied on the keepers of panel houses and places of a similar character in that precinct. The sergeants were instructed, says Groo, to report all panel house robberies to Terwilliger, and not to enter them on the blotter or investigate them, as the rule required. The robberies reported while Sergeant Groo was on duty were thus treated, and according to the memoranda purporting to have been kept by him, some fourteen cases placed in the hands of Terwilliger were hushed up; no arrests were made, and in some instances the felony was compounded. Terwilliger also, if Groo is to be believed, was the recipient of little considerations from panel house keepers, varying from five to fifty dollars, which account for the friendly settlement of the difficulties, and which Groo infers went into the pocket of the Captain. Now, Groo appears to have had difficulties with Captain Williams. Perhaps he found the precinct, as he says, an unpleasant one to serve in. It would have been safer, so far as his own record is concerned, if he had reported to headquarters the facts he now discloses. According to his story, he did not do so, but submitted to be removed on the complaint of the captain against whom he possessed all this damaging evidence. This may induce the committee to accept Groo's story with some caution. But Terwilliger is the man they want. He was a close friend of the captain. He must know all about the cases mentioned by Groo, and as he is still on the force—a patrolman up town, we are told—his attendance can readily be secured by the committee.

These developments made before the Assembly Committee, only lift one end of the veil that hides the rottenness of the Police Department. Everybody has known for some time that the panel house thieves and other law breakers ply their infamous trades with the knowledge of the police, and pay for the privilege of breaking the law without being called to account and punished. Indeed, the Police Commissioners recently transferred the several police captains to new districts on the very ground that they were suspected of collusion with the lawless classes in their old precincts. We are now told that an ex-Police Commissioner was a constant visitor of Captain Williams' precinct and was on closely familiar terms with that officer. Some of the present Commissioners have in like manner their cronies among the captains. Such associations cannot be productive of good or free from suspicion. They probably account for the evident disinclination of some of the Commissioners to drag the rascalities of their subordinates to light and for their efforts to smother or confuse investigation. The present inquiry will do good if it is to be honestly and energetically carried out. Its first work must be to get Terwilliger's evidence and the evidence of the panel house keepers themselves. It will then be important to inquire how it is that Groo, who confesses to a sort of complicity with the alleged misdeeds in his old district, is still on the police force? Why Terwilliger is still a patrolman? Why Captain Williams still has a command? Why the Police Commissioners, who appear to have been aware of these rascalities, have not long since instituted an investigation into them and discovered the evidence so speedily and voluntarily produced before the Assembly Committee? If Groo's story be true, we must look beyond Terwilliger and beyond Williams for the true cause of the increase of crime. The investigation must travel from the Eighth precinct to Mulberry street.

DOGS AND HOT WEATHER.—For yet another season the great canine and canicular problems are before the public. Bergh will begin to rage and the dog star will be mentioned; muzzles will come into the foreground; learned veterinarians will be brought forward to prove that hydrophobia is a delusion, and that it would be better for society if there were more of it; and, finally, the Aldermen will ordain that all loose dogs shall be impounded and otherwise legally dealt with, and in turn will be denounced for ignorance and barbarity. We regard it as a very satisfactory ignorance, however, which in the doubt and apprehension that naturally surround the disease of hydrophobia in dogs and men results in giving us the certainty of not encountering, in every few miles of our streets, from ten to fifty wretched and ownerless curs. It is clear enough legally, we suppose, that the owner of a dog which bites a person is responsible in damages; but who is responsible where the owner is not found? Presumably it must be the city, which by its negligence permits these curs to roam the streets. And the only way the city has to protect itself is to clear the streets of these useless and mischievous creatures.

NORTH CAROLINA POLITICS.—The Republican State Executive Committee have issued a long address to the voters of North Carolina denouncing the democratic Legislature for having called a convention to revise the State constitution. The people of other parts of the country cannot be expected to take much interest in a controversy so purely local, especially as it does not yet appear what changes the democrats intend to make. One of the complaints against them is that they do not avow their objects. Until the quarrel assumes a more intelligible shape it is not very likely to "fire the public heart."

THE AMERICAN RIFLE TEAM yesterday reviewed the army in camp at the Curragh of Kildare, near Dublin. The special cable despatches to the HERALD narrate the particulars of the cordial reception of our champion shots.

The Approaching Contests at Saratoga.

It is pleasant to note the satisfaction among rowing men and lovers of fair play generally over the plan to be introduced at the approaching University race of portioning off the course into parallel lanes, each a hundred feet wide, thus giving the many crews abundant room. By this plan the boat that strays into another's water can be detected at once and the blame laid where it belongs, and the bow oarsman who cannot steer his craft within bounds is unfit to be intrusted with his very responsible position. Whoever contemplates a run to Saratoga to see the great race will have the comfort of knowing that at last the day of fouls is over, and that, if his favorites do not win, they must lay the fault at their own door. We would take the liberty of offering one or two other ideas which seem to us to commend themselves to the good sense of the rowing community, and which, as they will probably be adopted in later years (for the contests are scarcely yet out of their infancy), had better be taken advantage of now.

All who have witnessed these races will remember that the plan adopted for distinguishing the various crews has been to require each to wear as a part of their headdress the favorite color of their college. Even in former days, when there were but two competing boats, this distinction proved very inadequate, and until within a quarter or half mile of the finish, especially if the sun's rays at all interfered, it was almost impossible to distinguish the crews, except to such spectators as could appreciate the different styles of rowing. But in these later years, when the number has swollen to more than twelve, and the crews save in head-gear, dressed to all appearance alike, and when of necessity it is hard to make the seven colors of the rainbow distribute well among so many; when, too, in the great heat and labor of the race, the rower is very apt to tear off this hot and useless head covering and throw it into the bottom of the boat, it is easy to see that in the intense flurry and excitement of the last half mile the average spectator cannot from his place on the grand stand tell with any accuracy one crew from another; and when the boats are at all close together, as in such a race many are sure to be, the confusion of last year in this respect will be found a regular if not necessary feature of what without it would be such an interesting and beautiful spectacle. Now, instead of doffing their shirts and donning these handkerchiefs, as they did last summer, let them retain the latter, and on the bow of their several craft raise a graceful little flag. It need be but a foot long and its staff of silver or burnished steel may be as light and graceful as the shell itself. When the boat comes home, instead of a few handkerchiefs swaying sharply back and forth, soaked and partially discolored, the motion of the boat will throw the flag out full and free, telling its story a mile away. And again, why need each college wear but a single color, or, at most, two? Instead of differing with Harvard as to which owned the crimson, what could be more appropriate for Union, for instance, than the beautiful little tricolor, the red, white and blue? And a moment's thought would soon arrange other combinations equally effective. It is proposed, we believe, that the oarsmen this year, as last, row without shirts. Will not this plan offend against propriety or decency?

We are glad to see that the gentlemen in charge of the foot races propose to insist that the contestants shall wear the usual costume. It can work no injustice, and the racing shirt is such a mere tissue of gauze at best that it can hardly incommode contestants enough to make five seconds' difference in their time.

Finally, it will also be remembered that when the crisis came last July and the boats were just starting the official timekeeper could not or would not serve, and only through the courtesy of Commodore Brady, who happened to be on the judges' boat, was the time obtained at all. A very simple contrivance will meet this need in the future. Let a wire be stretched across the lane of each boat just at the finish at such a depth that as the boat crosses the finish line its bow shall touch this wire. Let the wire connect with a chronograph so arranged as to catch the time of each touch, and with indicating inks on the instrument adapted to the color of each college. The times of the various boats can in this way be taken and recorded even down to a quarter of a second, and an end had to the frequent uncertainty that has existed as to just how quickly the rowers had done their work. We would commend this plan to the Saratoga Rowing Association.

The President's Summers at the Seaside.

President Grant's assailants obstruct their influence when they arraign him for parts of his conduct which are proper and justifiable, like his absence from Washington during the hot weather of summer. Such indiscriminate malignity is self-defeating, since it tends to undermine confidence in those who adopt so unscrupulous a method of warfare. It was the constant practice of our earlier Presidents to be absent from the seat of government for a considerable part of the year. We will mention Jefferson first, not because he began the practice, but because he was the first President inaugurated after the removal of the government to Washington and because the law which Grant is accused of violating was in force throughout the two terms of his Presidency. Now, Jefferson regularly spent about two months of every year while he was President at Monticello, as anybody may see by looking into the volumes of his correspondence and noticing the place at which his letters are dated in the summer and autumn months. He defended the practice in a letter addressed to Madison from Monticello, September 1, 1807, explaining why he had interrupted the daily post between his home and Washington. "The principal reason," he says, "was to avoid giving ground for clamor. The general idea is that those who receive annual compensations should be constantly at their posts. Our constituents might not in the first moment consider, first, that we all have property to take care of which we cannot abandon for temporary salaries; second, that we have health to take care of which cannot be preserved at Washington; third, that while at our separate homes our public duties are fully executed, and at much greater personal labor than while we are together, when a short conference saves a long letter." (Jefferson's Works, vol. 5, p. 181.) A letter to the Secretary of War a few days before (August 28) shows how the heads of departments were scattered:—"I send this letter open to the Secretary of State, with a desire that with the documents it be forwarded to the Secretary of the Navy at Baltimore, the Attorney General at Wilmington, the Secretary of the Treasury at New York, and finally to yourself."

President John Adams, who was accustomed to spend about five months of each year at Quincy, likewise defended the practice in his correspondence. He said, in a letter to Uriah Forrest, dated Quincy, May 13, 1799:—"The people elected me to administer the government, it is true, and I do administer it here at Quincy as really as I could do at Philadelphia. Nothing is done without my advice and direction when I am here more than when I am in the same city with the heads of departments." In a foot note to this letter his editor, Charles Francis Adams, remarks:—"In absenting himself from the seat of government during the recess of Congress Mr. Adams did no more than his predecessor, George Washington." If President Grant is violating the law by spending his summers at Long Branch his transgression is excused by a great weight of respectable precedents.

The law cited in condemnation of President Grant is this:—"All offices attached to the seat of government shall be exercised in the District of Columbia, and not elsewhere, except as otherwise expressly provided by law." This is wide of the mark, for the reason that the Presidency is not an office "attached to the seat of government." If it were every temporary absence of the President from Washington would devolve his duties on the Vice President. There is nothing either in the constitution or any statute making provision for the President's absence; but the statutes do carefully provide for the absence of the heads of departments by prescribing who shall perform their duties when they are absent. These offices are "attached to the seat of government," and the law requires them to be kept open at Washington a prescribed number of hours daily throughout the year, except in prevailing epidemics, when the President may cause them to be removed temporarily to some other place. But the office of the President is not thus localized by any statute, and could not be consistently with the constitution, which makes the President Commander-in-Chief of the Army, and thereby authorizes him to direct its operations in the field in person whenever he thinks proper. The Presidency is an office created by the constitution, and no mere statute can limit or localize it by attaching it to the seat of government. The Vice President can discharge its functions in case of "removal" or of "death," or of "resignation" or of "inability to discharge the duties;" but there is no provision for the case of absence, because the military powers of the President may be exercised in person wherever there is an army to command.

The example of Jefferson should satisfy democrats that Grant has not violated the law, for the law on this point has not been changed since the beginning of the century. Our democratic friends are "barking up the wrong tree" this time.

It is all very well to show that the law of the land has no knowledge of Long Branch as the seat of Presidential functions; but then what is the law compared to the personal convenience of a man like Grant? Do you want him to make more sacrifices? You had better be careful or he may resign, and then what would become of this country?

Queen Victoria has created three field marshals. The first is Sir John Forster Fitzgerald, the second the Marquis of Tweeddale, and the third His Royal Highness Albert Edward, Prince of Wales. The Marquis of Tweeddale has seen upwards of seventy years' service. He received the gold medal for the battle of Vittoria, in which action he was wounded. He served in the American war of 1813, and was again wounded.

LONDON, June 23, 1875.

The House of Commons to-day, at the close of an animated debate, rejected the bill to repeal the Contagious Diseases act by a vote of 308 to 126.

The government opposed the bill on the ground that the act it sought to repeal afforded great protection to the army and navy.

THE STEAMER SARANAC.

THE SHIPWRECKED OFFICERS AND CREW HOURLY EXPECTED AT VICTORIA—INCIDENTS OF THE LOSS—PROMPT ACTION OF HER MAJESTY'S STEAMERS.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23, 1875.

The following despatch from D. Eckstein, United States Consul at Victoria, has just been received by your correspondent here:—

None of the ships which have gone to the relief of the Saranac's crew have yet returned. I expect to hear from them to-night or to-morrow. The following are

THE PARTICULARS OF THE LOSS.

The Saranac struck a rock in Seymour Narrows, about ninety miles north of Nanaimo, on Friday morning, the 18th inst., at 8:45 A. M. She filled rapidly and sunk in about an hour thereafter in thirty fathoms of water. All hands reached the shore safely; no casualities reported. The officers and men have no canvas or anything to shelter them. They saved some stores, sufficient to prevent suffering from hunger; but little of any other property was brought on shore. Fresh water is scarce. A terrible rain storm prevailed on Saturday night, Sunday and Sunday night, and they must have suffered much from exposure. Lieutenant Commander Saunders and the pilot (George) left the scene of disaster in an open boat a short time after the vessel sunk. They went as far as Sanwich and thence to Victoria in a wagon, reaching here after six P. M. on Sunday, having suffered much from exposure. They immediately engaged the Hudson Bay Company's steamer Otter, which left the next morning at seven o'clock for Seymour Narrows. Lieutenant Saunders and pilot George returned in Her Majesty's steamer Myrmidon. Started from Esquimalt at one o'clock, and Her Majesty's ship Repulse, with Rear Admiral A. A. Cochrane, C. B., on board, at three o'clock P. M. of the same day for the same destination, ready and anxious to in their power. The mail steamer California, from Sitka, is fully due here, and expected to pass in close proximity to where the shipwrecked people are encamped.

RENDER EVERY ASSISTANCE

Some one of these ships is almost certain to arrive within a few hours with all on board. I have made provision to supply their wants on arrival here.

DESPATCHES RECEIVED AT THE NAVY DEPARTMENT.

WASHINGTON, June 23, 1875.

Two despatches were received at the Navy Department to-day in regard to the loss of the Saranac. The first was from Lieutenant Commander Saunders, executive officer of that vessel, dated Victoria, June 21, announcing the disaster, which occurred on Friday morning, and his arrival at Victoria to charter a steamer. The other despatch was from Admiral Cochrane, of Her Majesty's steamship Repulse, dated Vallijo, June 21. After announcing the disaster the Admiral says:—

I have despatched Her Majesty's ship Myrmidon to assist in every possible way. I leave on my flagship immediately on the same service

THE DEPARTURE OF THE BENICIA DELAYED.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23, 1875.

The departure of the corvette Benicia, Captain Hopkins, for Victoria will be delayed until to-morrow or later in consequence of now being aground through the fault of the pilot between here and Mare Island. She lies in a secure position, but it will require heavy tugging to get her off. There is nothing dangerous in her position, only a disagreeable delay resulting.

THE BLACK HILLS.

FURTHER CONFIRMATION OF THE GOLD DISCOVERIES—AN UNFAVORABLE REPORT FROM MR. JENNEY, IN CHARGE OF THE SURVEYING EXPEDITION.

CHICAGO, June 23, 1875.

The special correspondent of the Inter-Ocean with the scientific expedition to the Black Hills, at Camp Harney, on French Creek, Custer's Gulch, sends the following telegram, via Fort Laramie, of date June 16:—

Gold in large quantities and of good quality has been discovered in Custer's Gulch, on French Creek, and along this stream for a distance of upward of seven miles toward the source or gulch mines. There are scattered along French Creek four different mining parties, numbering twenty-five men, who have taken up claims on all of which good color has been obtained. There are also several quartz lodes which promise rich returns, but the greatest importance is attached to the gulch gold diggings. When the gold was discovered, the scientists were at Camp Tuttle and only arrived here yesterday afternoon, when they were somewhat astonished at the discovery. It is intended to make this the permanent camp, where the command will remain until the return of the supply train from Lawrence.

DESPATCH FROM MR. JENNEY.

WASHINGTON, June 23, 1875.

The following despatch has been received at the Indian Bureau from Mr. Jenney, dated Camp on French Creek, near Harney's Peak, June 17, 1875:—

To Hon. E. P. SMITH:—

I have discovered gold in small quantities on the north bend of the Castle Creek, in terraces or bars of quartz gravel. Arrived here yesterday. About fifteen miners have located camp on the creek above here and have commenced working. Gold is found from Castle Creek southwardly to French Creek, at this point, and the deposits are almost wholly in Dakota. The region has not been fully explored, but the yield of gold thus far has been quite small, and the reports of the richness of the gravel bars are greatly exaggerated. On French Creek the deposits of gravel are very unfavorably situated. The water supply is small and failing and the grade too little to admit of the tailings being carried off by the stream. The prospect at present is not such as to warrant extended explorations in mining.

W. P. JENNY, E. M. G. Expedition.

THE DISCOVERIES CONFIRMED BY COLONEL DODGE.

WASHINGTON, June 23, 1875.

A despatch received at the War Department today from Assistant Adjutant General Whipple, of General Sherman's staff, dated St. Louis, Mo., June 23, announces that a despatch just received there from Colonel Dodge, dated Harney's Peak, June 17, reports that gold was found in paying quantities on French Creek. Custer's report is confirmed in every particular. Colonel Dodge reports the command is well and in fine condition. He has written fully upon the discovery and will forward his reports by mail.

INDIAN WAR THREATENED.

OMAHA, Neb., June 23, 1875.

Advices from Spotted Tail's agency state that three large war parties left that vicinity on the 17th inst., one each for the Ponca or Pawnee, Ute and Shoshone reservations. It is thought among posted men that a gigantic Indian war is about to be inaugurated. Information has been sent to the Indian agents.

TROUBLE WITH THE SIOUX AND CHEYENNES ANTICIPATED BY FRONTIERSMEN AND ARMY OFFICERS.

OMAHA, Neb., June 23, 1874.

Prominent frontiersmen and army officers express the opinion that there will be great trouble with the Sioux, Cheyennes and Arapaches this summer and fall. At least five large war parties have left the reservations during the last two weeks. The cavalry in this department are unable to keep them on the reservations, through limited numbers. It will be impossible for the soldiers to guard the Black Hills and attend to the Indians.

POSTMASTER GENERAL JEWELL.

THE POSTMASTER GENERAL ON POST OFFICES AND GOVERNMENT EMPLOYMENT.

CINCINNATI, June 28, 1575.

Postmaster General Jewell arrived in this city this morning and was on the floor of the Chamber of Commerce to-day at noon. He was introduced to the members by Colonel Holloway, President of the Chamber, in a few well chosen words. General Jewell, after thanking the Chamber for the warmth of his reception, said:—I am delighted to hear your President say that you commend the idea that government offices should be conducted for the benefit of the people and not for the benefit of individuals, and I find that on every attempt to conduct the department over which I preside on these principles I have been met by looks of approval by the commercial community all over the country. Therefore I believe it entirely possible to conduct any department of the government, and run it in the interest of itself by promoting celerity, security and accuracy in all ramifications and doing away with some of the red tape which has heretofore encumbered it. I was not aware of the extent of this mighty country until I came to look at it. I find it entirely impossible to do our postal business exclusively in post offices located in cities, and therefore it is being largely done on wheels. I find in the Valley of the Mississippi 1,200 clerks distributing letters and papers as the cars are in motion, and I find that they distribute more than 40,000,000 of letters per month. I find that in the Cincinnati Post Office, the fifth in size in the country, you distribute 50,000 letters per month and from 20 to 25 tons of mail matter altogether.

THE HOWARD UNIVERSITY.

ELECTION OF A PRESIDENT—STORIES REGARDING THE INSTITUTION DENIED—ITS FINANCIAL CONDITION.

WASHINGTON, June 23, 1875.

The trustees of Howard University on the 16th inst. elected as President Rev. George Whipple, D. D., of New York. For nearly two years, since the resignation of General O. O. Howard, John M. Langston, Vice President, has discharged the duties of the position. Professor Langston was a candidate for the Presidency, and his claims were urged before the Board with great earnestness through memorials numerously signed and verbally, by trustees, mainly on the ground that it was due to the race that the organization should be in the hands of the colored man. Personal gratification was the only other question discussed in presenting the claims of the respective candidates. The ballot resulted in ten votes for Whipple and four for Langston. It is not true that the management of the institution has been transferred to the American Missionary Society, or that it is to be conducted in the interest of the Congregational Church, or that any such question was ever presented, considered or discussed. Nor has any change whatever in the character or scope of the university been proposed by any person in any meeting of the trustees. The statements published during the last week affecting of the institution are equally untrue. During the past year its business affairs have been simplified by the exchange of notes due the university, amounting to nearly $100,000, in payment of debts of about the same amount, which left the institution after such exchange owing less than $30,000, and in possession of a property in real estate, bonds and other securities, the cash value of which is considerably above $1,000,000, the largest portion of which is in its buildings, ground and unimproved real estate. Its present organization is not only in accord with the wishes of a large majority of the Board of Trustees, but with the almost unanimous wish of the students and of its friends who know the facts existing. The only exceptions are found among the personal adherents of disappointed aspirants for position.

THE FINANCIAL CONDITION

CONSOLIDATION OF RAILROADS.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 23, 1875.

A special despatch to the Republican from Kansas City says:—The rumor of a proposed consolidation of the Kansas Pacific and Union Pacific railways is creating quite a stir in this city. The managers of Wells, Fargo & Co.'s Express are preparing to move out, the railroad company intending to run their own express. President Dillon, of the Union Pacific; President Carr, of the Kansas Pacific, and five directors' cars of different roads were here yesterday. It is probable that through freight and Pullman cars will be run from St. Louis to Ogden over the St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern Railway.

THE CANADIAN SHOE TRADE.

The Shoe and Leather Association have passed a resolution urging the Dominion government to grant them an incidental protection, equal to the United States tariff, on all kinds of boots and shoes, of whatever material they may be made.

IMPORTANT TREASURY CIRCULAR—THE PRINCIPLES GOVERNING THE DECLARATION OF INVOICE VALUE.

The Treasury Department has issued, for the information of parties shipping goods to the United States, a circular to collectors, appraisers and others declaratory of the laws relative to invoices. An impression has seemed to prevail abroad that goods sent by the manufacturer abroad to a consignee in the United States for sale on his account could be invoiced at a small fraction above the cost of manufacture, thus giving an advantage over goods purchased from the manufacturer, which are required to be invoiced at the cost price, usually based on the open market value of such goods. To correct this impression and to fully inform shippers of the true state of the law upon the subject, the circular, after citing the provisions of law applicable, declares two general principles governing the declaration of invoice value, as follows:—

First—As to merchandise acquired by purchase, the invoice must state the actual cost thereof, with charges, &c.

Second—As to merchandise acquired otherwise than by purchase, the invoice must exhibit the actual market value thereof at the period of exportation in the principal markets of the country from whence exported, with the charges, and not merely the cost to the manufacturer or producer. Certain rules for determining the market value are specifically set forth in the circular.

JUDICIAL DECISION REGARDING THE POWERS OF INTERNAL REVENUE COLLECTORS.

The Comptroller of the Currency has received information of a decision recently rendered by Judge McCandless, in an action of debt brought against the cashier of the Monongahela National Bank of Brownsville, Pa., to recover a penalty of $500 for the refusal of the cashier to permit the Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue to examine the checks on file in said bank. The Court entered judgment for the defendant, holding that the internal revenue collector had no right, under section 3,177 of the Revised Statutes, to exercise the powers claimed by him.

THE CALIFORNIA INDEPENDENTS.

MEETING OF THE STATE CONVENTION—CORRUPTION OF THE OLD POLITICAL PARTIES—DENUNCIATIONS OF THE PACIFIC RAILROAD AND OTHER MONOPOLIES.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23, 1875.

The Independent State Convention, which met at Sacramento yesterday, adopted a platform in which, after stating that both the political parties in California have fallen into the control, in a large measure, of the more worthless elements of society, it resolved:—

That the people's independent party seeks to unite together honest and law-abiding citizens of all portions of California, irrespective of class, local or business distinctions, and regardless of religion or previous political opinion, for the purpose of bringing about a thorough system of reform in the State, county and municipal governments, and especially with a view of securing retrenchment in public expenditures; a consequent reduction of taxation; the regulation and control of all corporations exercising franchises of a political nature; the reduction to a reasonable rate of fares and freight on railroads, as well as steamboats operated in conjunction with railroads; in the prevention and punishment of unjust discriminations by railroads and other corporations against localities and individuals; the securing from power or possibility of monopoly the natural water of the rivers, streams and lakes of the State, revesting them once more in the people: the rescue of the inhabitants of cities and towns from the oppressive power of water and gas corporations and other kindred monopolies; the purification of the administration of justice throughout the State by reforming the grand jury system so that powerful criminals may be punished as well as weak, and generally to secure such improved legislation in the interest of good government as wisdom and an honest purpose of reform may suggest.

THE PACIFIC RAILROAD.

In regard to the Pacific Railroad the platform says:—

Whereas, through improvident and inconsiderate legislation the funds generously appropriated by the nation and materially increased by California, its cities and counties, to aid in constructing the Pacific Railroad, have been so employed, that a small number of individuals, acting in a corporate capacity, now own and control the only trans-continental railroad in the country, together with almost the entire railroad system of the State, as well as river, steamer and ferry boats plying upon our interior waters, thereby practically monopolizing, not only the entire overland traffic, but likewise the general carrying trade of the State and coast; and whereas the corporations controlling these railroads and steamboats possess and exercise the power to arbitrarily make, levy and collect thereon rates of freight and passenger fare, and enact and enforce rules and regulations at their own pleasure; and whereas it is apparent that there can be no relief from the excessive charges and unjust discriminations of the railroad corporations through competition, because of their vast wealth and power, which are used invariably to break down all rival enterprises and ruin their projectors; and, failing in that, then combine with them against the people; and, whereas, in order to retain this power to fix rates and discriminate at pleasure, and prevent any legislative relief from being extended the people, the railroad corporations have in the past systematically intermeddled with and corrupted the politics of the State, using its wealth and influence to elevate schemes, and in many cases to place its interested partisans in the Legislature and other stations of trust where they could vote away the people's rights, until the domination of the railroads and other corporations in our politics and government have become an intolerable evil; therefore

Resolved, That there is and can be no safety to good government, capital or production so long as the corporation in transportation by railroad and steamboat in this State, possess the power, independently of law, to make their own rules and regulations, or to establish and collect tolls and rates of freight and fare at their own unrestricted will and pleasure.

Resolved, That the rates of freight and fare charged and collected on the railroads of California and on steamboats owned and operated in connection with them in most places where there is no competition are unjust, unequal and excessively high, and the power now exercised by the railroad corporations in making regulations in relation to rates is exercised in an unjust and oppressive manner to the injury of individuals and localities as well as the general productive interests of the State.

The platform then refers to the many monopolies throughout the State, and their deleterious effect on the prosperity of the citizens, and pledges the efforts of the party to their suppression. It was adopted viva voce. Messrs. Estee, of San Francisco; Biddle, of Butte, and Cattlin, of Sacramento, were placed in nomination for Governor. Without coming to a vote the Convention adjourned until ten o'clock A. M. to-day.

THE NOMINATIONS MADE.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23, 1875.

The following additional nominations were made in the Independent Convention to-day:—

For Comptroller—Lauren E. Crane.
For Treasurer—F. Baenr.
For Attorney General—P. Van Clief.
For Surveyor General—E. Twitchell.

THE PROHIBITION MEN.

SYRACUSE, June 23, 1875.

The Prohibition State Convention completed its organization this forenoon, and nominated a part of the State ticket as follows:—

For Secretary of State—G. D. Dusenbury, of Ontario.
Comptroller—Anson A. Hopkins, of Monroe.
Treasurer—Stephen B. Ayers, of Yates.
The Convention then took a recess.

The following is the remainder of the ticket nominated by the prohibitionists:—

State Engineer and Surveyor—George A. Dudley, of Ulster.
Canal Commissioner—Ira D. Bell, of St. Lawrence.
State Prison Inspector—John B. Gibb, of New York.
Attorney General—Eli T. Marsh, of Herkimer.

The following platform was adopted:—

Resolved, That we recognize Almighty God in every true reform, and especially do we acknowledge His hand in the progress of the prohibition sentiment of this State and nation.

Resolved, That it is neither right nor politic for the State to license any traffic or system that tends to increase crime, corrupt morals and destroy life.

Resolved, That we are unalterably committed to an amendment to the constitution of this State prohibiting the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages.

Resolved, That as all true temperance men have acknowledged the justice of prohibition and unity of thought has been secured, we ask all temperance men and organizations to combine in unity of action with our movement.

Resolved, That the complicity of the national government in the crime of liquor traffic makes the issue a national one and demands a national prohibition party.

Adjourned sine die.

THE CANAL INVESTIGATION.

THE JOINT LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE INVESTIGATING THE CANAL FRAUDS—TESTIMONY OF EXPERTS.

BUFFALO, June 23, 1875.

The Joint Committee of the Senate and Assembly, to investigate the canal frauds, met, according to adjournment, this morning at ten o'clock, and remained in session until one P. M. for the examination of witnesses.

Ex-Congressman Taylor testified, in substance:—Became acquainted with the Dennison work in 1873; drove bottom pegs; drilled into the slate rock; in the settlement of final accounts slate rock was paid for fifteen inches deep; the lining should be of gravel, which is put behind walls when being constructed to prevent the wall from heaving by frost and for drainage; the construction of the wall commenced at the bottom of the canal and the lining was put in as the wall advanced; the defect of the work was in not having proper linings and in this respect the contract was not complied with; in seven places opened and examined by the Commission the stone in three places was too small and poorly laid and in two places large and well laid.

W. H. Douglass, of this city, testified substantially as follows:—Am interested in the contract in the name of William J. Mowry, of Syracuse, now being prosecuted by Clark and Bennett. The surface of the lake is on the same level as the surface of the canal. The earth and rock at the bottom were excavated and the rock excavation completed. In the spring we commenced construction of the wall. The work under the original contract is about completed, $25,000 having been expended on the contract. No rock was estimated for which has not been removed. We are short on the east excavations.

W. W. Wright, Ex-Canal Commissioner; J. F. Bern and Contractor Clark were briefly examined, but nothing of importance was elicited.

The Commissioners adjourned, subject to the call of the Chairman.

The Commissioners, with other invited guests, dined with Lieutenant Governor Dorsheimer today. The party will leave for the East to-morrow.

THE NEW YORK SCHUETZENFEST.

The closing festivites of the New York Schuetzen Corps were celebrated in the Park at Union Hill yesterday. Visitors thronged the grounds all day, and music, dancing, boating, bowling matches, &c., were indulged in. In the evening, when the three days' contest was at an end, there was a grand display of enthusiasm. The prizes were distributed amid loud cheers and measures of foaming beer. The king, who was crowned and presented with $50 in gold and a magnificent medal valued at $75, was Mr. C. Bruns, of University place. Captain Airy, of the Schuetzen Corps, won the second premium, $50 in greenbacks. Mr. Bruns was initiated into the corps only on last Friday. The carnival was kept up through the grounds until an early hour this morning.

NO PIGEON SHOOTING IN JERSEY.

The New Jersey Sportsmen's Club have obtained permission of the Board of Aldermen of Jersey City to shoot pigeons at the West Side Park once a month. The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals steps in, however, and the sport must be abandoned. Special officers have been detailed to prevent the shooting, and if the club should persist the law, which is very stringent in Jersey, will be resorted to.

CUBA LIBRE.

PRESIDENT AGUILERA'S PROCLAMATION TO THE SPANIARDS—AN ELOQUENT APPEAL TO THE GOOD SENSE AND ENLIGHTENMENT OF THE NATION.

As exclusively told in the HERALD of last week, Francisco V. Aguilera, President of the Republic of Cuba, has landed on the soil of Cuba. The following appeal is being circulated and made by him to the Spaniards in Cuba, looking to a speedy termination of the Cuban revolution, which commenced in October, 1868.

TO THE SPANIARDS IN CUBA:—

When, in October, 1868, we rose in arms against Spanish rule it was not on account of personal hatred of yourselves or dislike of Spain. Without hesitation we commenced the life and death struggle. for our cup of suffering was full to the brim; our patience, begotten of despair, was exhausted; for we had no faith in Spain, who called herself "Our mother," but who always was heedless of the just petitions of her son; and until at length naught remained to us to do but the appeal to arms to obtain our rights and liberties.

DIED FOR THE CAUSE OF FREEDOM.

With the noble sentiment of liberty inspiring them a large number of our people fell fighting on behalf of their usurped rights. With these aspirations toward liberty the people of Cuba commenced her labor of redemption. Since the flag of free Cuba was first unfurled on the plains of Yara, and when our cry was liberty or death, then till now our arms have been successful, and now at the present day our troops are located in the fertile fields of the Occidental Department. Mankind at large, which has witnessed our struggle, cannot fail to have approved our fight on behalf of humanity for democratic principles. We released the slaves, and they, under the ægis of the banner of free Cuba, became as men once more, and joined us in our conquest of civilization.

THE CONSTITUTION.

Our constitution has for its basis, liberty, equality and fraternity, thus placing Cuban, Spaniard and men of every race on the same level. As a proof of our good faith in this matter. our Chamber of Representatives, in August, 1875, declared that Spaniards were eligible to employment in the service of the Republic of Cuba.

JUDGE INDEPENDENTLY.

Spaniards, do not believe what your papers tell you—that the existence of our Republic is a sham, or that our constitution is a mere chimera. Your press anathematizes all that is noble and holy, because it maintains its existence by trading upon your patriotism and credulity. For seven years you have been told that the revolution was approaching its end. Rich and poor among you have had to contribute to its expenses. Days, months and years pass, but peace comes not. The beauties of that day, so often depicted to you by your rulers, have to give way for the dark night of bankruptcy and ostracism, which has now fallen on the island. These existing misfortunes will, however, better pave the way and hasten the advent of Cuban independence. Since we were in possession of the town of Bayamo, when the son of Cuba and the son of Spain enjoyed equal rights, since that time our laws have been respected and carried out in all the revolutionary districts. Spain's indifference to the struggle and failure to agree with us upon a basis for carrying on the war have caused many painful reprisals in the matters of burning and killing. Our brethren are, however, given to clemency, and thousands of your numbers, who have been our prisoners, are now enjoying the gift of life at our hands.

Spaniards, your own common sense will tell you that victory is on our side, and that we shall continue advancing until we reach Havana. Every year that the war continues in Cuba Spain loses 10,000 or 12,000 of her children, while the prosecution of the war costs the Spanish residents of Cuba upward of $30,000,000 annually. These statistics, taken from the Diario de la Marina of the 15th of November, 1874, show the utter impossibility of Spain and your power to overcome us. In addition to this there must be taken into consideration that your property is depreciated by the war to the fifth of its former value, and that the thirty millions above alluded to is but to defray actual war expenses.

THE AMNESTY.

Then take again the recent offer of Captain General Valmaseda, from his headquarters at Colon, offering pardon to about 7,000 deserters who have joined our forces if they will re-enter the Spanish service. This offer of receiving back deserters without punishment shows the desperate straits in which the Spanish government finds itself.

HOW LONG?

I do not speak to you on the subject of how long the struggle will yet last. For the sake of the happiness of Cuba it is to be hoped that it may not continue much longer. We have the unalterable belief that we shall triumph sooner or later, and to tell you this I have taken up my pen. The Diario de la Marina and La Voz de Cuba will tell you, with reference to this appeal to your conscience, that it is an evident sign of our weakness, even though the cry of our troops is heard in the rich savannahs of Colon. The richest and most productive parts of the island will be reduced to cinders to bring about our absolute independence. We hope that this, however, will not be necessary, and you will not force us to gain our independence at this terrible cost to our country.

Spaniards, if you wish to live in peace, if you desire that tranquility shall reign in the land, if you desire recompense for your labor, if you are not dead to all sentiments of honor and truth, if you wish the existence of a united Cuba, come to our side and help to hasten the advent of independence. If you accept our terms the wealth of the Occidental Department shall be respected, and, ere long, the land will recuperate its losses; but if you will not blood shall still flow and fire shall scourge the land. We offer to meet you as brothers, and if you refuse that as foes.

Spaniards, long live the independence of Cuba.

FRANCISCO V. AGUILERA.

A telegram from Springfield, Mass., under date of the 23d of June, reports as follows:—"Orrin Sage, a prominent and wealthy citizen of Ware, after whom the town of Osage, Iowa, was named, died to-day, aged eighty-four years."

JOSEPH WILSON, PAYMASTER UNITED STATES NAVY.

Commodore Nichols, commanding the Boston Navy Yard, reports to the Navy Department in Washington the death of Paymaster Joseph Wilson, United States Navy, which occurred at his residence at Swampscott, Mass., on the 19th inst. Mr. Wilson was a native of Massachusetts. He entered the service of the United States from that State on the 24th of July, in the year 1813. His latest commission was dated on the 3d of March, 1871. He performed active service at sea during a period of eighteen years, his last cruise having expired in the month of November, 1861.

A.—NO USE OF ANY LONGER TAKING THE large, repulsive, griping, drastic and nauseous pills, composed of crude and bulky ingredients, and put up in cheap wood or pasteboard boxes, when we can, by a careful application of chemical science, extract all the cathartic and other medicinal properties from the most valuable roots and herbs and concentrate them into a minute granule scarcely larger than a mustard seed, that can be readily swallowed by those of the most sensitive stomachs and fastidious tastes. Each of Dr. PIERCE'S PLEASANT PURGATIVE PELLETS represents, in a most concentrated form, as much cathartic power as is embodied in any of the large pills found for sale in the drug stores. From their wonderful cathartic power, in proportion to their size, people who have not tried them are apt to suppose that they are harsh or drastic in effect, but such is not at all the case, the different active medicinal principles of which they are composed being so harmonized one by the others as to produce a most searching and thorough yet gently and kindly operating cathartic. The Pellets are sold by dealers in medicines.

WALL STREET, }
WEDNESDAY, June 23—6 P. M. }

Wall street to-day was the scene of another financial somersault, and was much excited by contradictory statements. The price of every active security advanced, and, for the moment, the undertone of the market, as expressed by ordinary street gossip, favors higher prices. There have been few occasions, however, in the history of the New York Stock Exchange when its great power has been so completely held within one grasp as now. It is, of course, owing to the controlling influence of individual capital, and a change has suddenly occurred, the results of which may be reflected throughout the entire country. On what substantial basis this movement has taken place is a fact yet to be revealed. The commerce between railroads, the general trade of merchants, the reports of manufacturers and miners, the exciting condition of all the industries that have been rudely disturbed during the past two years contribute nothing by way of encouragement, though they may do so hereafter. It is only the figures of the New York stock market and the accompanying gossip that tell the story. From the latter we learn:—1. That the Pacific Mail Steamship Company to-day authorized their managing director to sign a contract with the representative of the colonial government of Australia, whereby monthly service is to be secured with the latter at the rate of about $450,000 per annum, special sidewheel steamers to be detached for the purpose. 2. That the New Zealanders are equally anxious to come into a similar arrangement with the company and pay £80,000 per annum. 3. That the Japanese are solicitously interchanging telegraphic despatches to prevent if possible the sale to anybody else of the four sidewheel steamers that ply between the Chinese ports and their own, and that $1,000,000 may eventually be paid to the Pacific Mail people for their gracious indulgence. 4. That, in consequence of suddenly discovered strength, the stock is about to mount up to figures anywhere from 42 to 70, and become another "Big Bonanza." The public may believe what it pleases concerning these rumors, and the latter may be mingled with enough of truth to save them from utter condemnation, but it is not advisable at this moment for any man who is not on the spot to take advantage of sudden changes to invest his hundreds or thousands on either side of so desperate a game. The opening prices of Pacific Mail to-day were 37 a 36⅞, from which there was a decline to 36⅝. At this recovery commenced, and the close showed sales at 39⅝ a 39¾, with 40 bid afterward. Lake Shore showed the next greatest strength and advanced 1⅞ per cent on sales of 70,000 shares. The opening was made at 60⅛, the lowest price was 60⅛, the highest and close 62. It is said that a new combination has been made in this stock, and another deal will occur on the present market. Western Union was likewise very strong, and confidently bought up to 34,000 shares between 72⅞ a 74. St. Paul common rose from 32⅛ to 33; preferred, 54⅛ a 54⅝. Northwest common advanced from 37⅛ to 38⅝; the preferred was steady at 49⅛ a 49¾. Union Pacific was steady at 73⅛ a 74. Other stocks were not important in their changes and are quoted below.

WEDNESDAY, June 23—6 P. M.

Irregularity was still the dominant feature in commercial circles, and prices of many commodities were still very uncertain. On 'Change flour was steady. Wheat was irregular and lower. Corn was easier. Oats lower, but closing firm. Whiskey steady. Pork and lard were quiet, but decidedly firmer. Very little was done. Cotton on the spot was firmer, and futures were firm. Petroleum was steady, and closed weak. Naval stores were quiet and firmer. Hides were steady. Leather was quiet. Oils were quiet. Hemp and jute were inactive. Gunnies were firm. Groceries were quiet.

Cotton on the spot, under a fair demand from exporters, ruled firmer, with holders in most cases asking higher prices, but failing to establish any advance in quotations. The sales, however, were at full figures. After 'Change 500 bales were sold to exporters and it was rumored that other business had been completed, particulars of which we were unable to learn. The inquiry from spinners was generally for moderate lots for present use. Futures closed firm at an advance of ⅛c. Late telegraphic private advices from Europe indicated an uneasy feeling as prevailing, owing to a failure announced and others apprehended, but as to the Liverpool market reported the situation as not different from that noted in the public reports. YACHTING.

The Eighth Annual Regatta of the Columbia Yacht Club.

A PLEASANT SAIL ON THE HUDSON.

The Lillie, George B. Dean and The Tough the Winners.

Yesterday morning did not look very promising for a pleasant day overhead, and many of the guests that had made arrangements to witness the eighth annual regatta of the Columbia Yacht Club stopped at home rather than face the rain. The steamer Metamora had been chartered by the club for the day, and was advertised to make its first call at the foot of West Eleventh street at half-past nine A. M. The Regatta Committee, finding the morning so wet and uncomfortable, concluded to postpone, and the chairman of the committee started for the foot of West Eleventh street to order the boat home. On his arrival there he found such a number of people on the dock that he concluded it would be best to let things go as they were, and his judgment proved correct. After taking on board all that had tickets the Metamora steamed up to the foot of Fifty-seventh street, North River, where the club house is located and where the yachts were preparing for the contest. The weather appeared to be breaking, and occasional glimpses of sunshine livened up the party. The Regatta Committee—Messrs. James A. Smith, William Coppersmith, Luke Welsh, Morris Randall and Robert Nelson—issued the following instructions in regard to

THE COURSE.

"Yachts will start from an anchorage off the club house, foot of Fifty-seventh street, and proceed to stakeboat, anchored off Mount St. Vincent, turning it from east to west, thence to home stakeboat anchored off the club house, leaving it on the starboard hand. For third class, from their anchorage to and around a stakeboat anchored off Spuyten Duyvil, turning from east to west, thence to home stakeboat, leaving the same on the starboard hand. Yachts will be in time promptly at ten A. M., taking their position as follows:—Cabin sloops in advance; open sloops to southward, in their respective classes. Yachts will fly the club signal at their peak."

The following yachts started in the race:—

Names.	Owners.	Length. Feet.
FIRST CLASS SLOOPS.
Undine	Brockway & Manson	37.4
E. Rowe	W. H. Rowe	32.2
Lillie	J. A. & B. H. Weaver	30.2
SECOND CLASS SLOOPS.
Annie L	Freeman & Gannon	22.9
Au Revoir	Heap & Murphy	22.9
George B. Dean	George Roahr	22.4
THIRD CLASS SLOOPS.
Columbia	Vice Commodore Osborn	17.4
Tough	Benjamin Carr	15.7
SPECIAL PRIZE.
Journeyman	Commodore R. McWhinney	28.8

The yachts lost considerable time preparing for the contest, and it was afternoon before they were anchored in position. At 12h. 32m. the starting gun was fired.

The yachts got away very cleverly, and just after they ran up their jib, a pleasant little puff from the southeast sent them all off together. The Undine gradually pushed her way to the head of the fleet, followed by the Lillie. The Journeyman came next, with the Dean off her weather bow. The Au Revoir followed in the wake of the Dean a short distance ahead of the cabin sloop T. Rowe. The little Tough was the next, some distance ahead of the Annie L. and the Columbia. About a mile from home the Dean was slipping along the New York shore, while the rest of the fleet were in the middle of the stream, nearly becalmed. Presently they all caught the breeze and started ahead, the Journeyman coming up to windward of the Undine; the Lillie followed next and the Dean was away ahead of the fleet. A big cabin sloop, not in the race, sailed by some lunkhead that ought to be on a canal boat instead of a yacht, came up to windward of the little Tough and completely stopped her headway. There was very little wind, and what there was came in light puffs that did not seem to last more than five minutes. The Dean appeared to carry a breeze all the time and was slipping away from the fleet, followed by the Journeyman, with the Undine down to leeward. The Tough had her jib run out to starboard, and was close behind the Rowe. The schooner yacht lay at anchor off Carmansville, and at that point the Dean led the fleet, followed by the Journeyman and Undine. The rest of the yachts were some distance behind, but appeared to be bringing up a breeze with them. The tide was still running flood on the New York shore. The Lillie came up, closing the gap between her and the Undine, and the Tough was also slipping along handsomely. In the meantime the guests were exercising themselves under the orders of the master of the ceremonies, and appeared well drilled in the movements, hands all round, ladies to the right, gents in the middle, &c., &c.

OFF SPUYTEN DUYVIL

the Dean was leading the fleet about a quarter of a mile in advance of the Journeyman. The Undine was to leeward of the Journeyman, and all three were slipping along at a lively gait under a beam wind. The stakeboat for the third class sloops was anchored off the Spuyten Duyvil dock and the Tough was coming along nearly a mile in advance of her antagonist, the Columbia. The first and second class yachts still held on, as they had to turn a stakeboat off Mount St. Vincent. There was now quite a pleasant breeze, and as the sun was shining, "breaking through the foul and ugly mists of vapor that did seem to strangle it," the day proved quite enjoyable, notwithstanding the gloomy aspect of affairs before the start. At 2h. 10m. the Metamora arrived off and took up a position to leeward of the stakeboat. The Dean was coming along quite fast and rounded the stakeboat, first of the fleet. She immediately trimmed down her sheets and started for her home on the port tack, stretching across the river and passing to leeward of the rest of the fleet that were still on the way up. The Journeyman and the Undine came up bow and bow, the former on the outside, and they made quite a pretty turn, not interfering with one another. The Journeyman was the quickest to get away, and led the Undine. Both reaching across on the port tack. The Lillie came next, second in her class, but the Undine had got a long start ahead. The Lillie, close hauled, appeared to be holding a better wind than the Undine. Going home the fleet made short tacks along the

MOUNT ST. VINCENT

JERSEY SHORE,

in the hopes of catching the first of the ebb. The Dean was still leading the fleet, with the Journeyman next, some distance ahead of the Undine. The Au Revoir rounded next, followed a few minutes later by the Annie L. The Elizabeth Rowe was the next, bringing up the rear, and then the steamer followed after the fleet. There was still a light breeze, sufficient to keep the yachts moving, but it was rather slow work. The yachts rounded the stakeboat in the following order:—

Names.	H.	M.	S.	Names.	H.	M.	S.
George B. Dean	2	15	00	Au Revoir	2	30	00
Journeyman	2	17	00	Annie L	2	33	00
Undine	2	17	00	E. Rowe	2	36	30
Lillie	2	24	00

The race home was very interesting, as it was a dead beat down the river, and gave the yachts a fair chance of testing their sailing qualities. The Journeyman sailed remarkably well, and one time it looked as if she would pass the Dean, but the latter was a trifle to fast on the wind and held her lead. The Lillie was also doing well and gradually closing the gap between her and the Undine. The little Tough was away ahead of the entire fleet and looked like an easy winner of the prize in her class.

THE METAMORA

steamed quietly down and arriving off the Club House took up a position to see the yachts return home. The Judges, Benjamin Weaver, Alderman S. N. Simonson and Alderman Gilon, were on board taking the time. The Tough was the first home, followed some fifteen minutes later by the George B. Dean. The latter appeared a general favorite and was loudly applauded as she sailed round the club steamer. The Journeyman came next, but three minutes too late to win the special prize for the first boat home, for which she had been entered. The Undine was the next in, followed shortly afterward by the Au Revoir and Lillie. The following is the time of arrival, actual time and corrected time of the yachts:—

Names.	Arrival. H. M. S.	Actual. H. M. S.	Corrected. H. M. S.

THE OCEAN SCHOONER RACE.

The ocean schooner race for the prizes offered by the Commodore and Rear Commodore of the Seawanhaka Yacht Club, will be sailed to-day outside the Hook. The race is open to all schooners belonging to the New York, Eastern, Brooklyn, Boston, Atlantic and Seawanhaka yacht clubs. The schooners are divided into two classes, those over ninety feet and those ninety feet and under. The prizes offered in each class are valued at $300 each.

OFFICIAL PROGRAMME.

The course will be from buoy No. 5, off Sandy Hook, twenty miles to windward and return if the wind permits, or twenty miles to leeward and return. Yachts will pass between the judge's steamer and the buoy going out and coming home, at which points the time will be taken. After starting the yachts the steamer will proceed to and be stationed at the turning point, and yachts in rounding will leave her on the starboard hand. The start will be a flying one, and the signals which will be given from the judge's steamer will be as follows:—For preparatory signal, a prolonged blast of the whistle and lowering of the club flag. Fifteen minutes later for the start, the same signals will be repeated. Fifteen minutes will be allowed for crossing the line, after which no yacht's time will be taken. All yachts in the race will fly their private signal from the main peak.

The race is to be sailed under the sailing regulations of the Seawanhaka Yacht Club and governed by the following Regatta Committee:—Frederic G. Foster, M. Roosevelt, Schuyler W. Kretz, James H. Elliot and J. De Forest Woodruff. The following yachts have entered for the race:—

THE OAR.

IMPORTANT BOATING EVENTS ON THE HARLEM—RICHARD BAINBRIDGE DEFEATS FRANK E. YATES FOR THE AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP OF SINGLE SCULLERS—ELLISON AND LELAND, OF THE NEW YORK ROWING CLUB, THE WINNERS OF ASSOCIATION MEDALS.

The settlement of a question which has long agitated the boating circles of this vicinity was arrived at yesterday afternoon on the Harlem River. It was the question whether Richard Bainbridge, of New York, representing the Atalanta Club, or Frank E. Yates, of Chicago, representing the New York Athletic Club, should hold the title of amateur champion of single scullers.

The contest was for a medal of the value of $100. It was to have been decided on Tuesday, but rough water prevented. The race was a straight-away pull of three miles over the regularly surveyed course. The day was pleasant, but the southwest wind was a little fresh for such a contest. Instead of rowing down the course the men agreed to pull up the river just at the turn of the tide. The race was honestly contested to the end, and grandly won by Bainbridge, who agreeably disappointed all his friends. The shells were launched from Roahr's boat house, and the steamboat Osseo conveyed spectators, referee and judges over the course. Yates won the toss for positions, selecting the Westchester shore, or the right of the powder schooner, near the Railroad Bridge.

THE RACE.

The tide was just turning ebb, and the southwesterly breeze caught the boats on the quarter with much force. When the word was given to be away Bainbridge first caught the water and almost lifted his boat over it. Such a start and such a perceptible advantage gained over a formidable antagonist has rarely, if ever, before been seen. To the tune of thirty-eight to the minute Bainbridge started away, and before a dozen boat's lengths had been gone was half a length in advance of Yates. Opposite the Athletic Club grounds the advantage of Bainbridge was increased to three lengths. At Macomb's Dam Bridge, which Bainbridge shot under in 7m. 30s., and sixteen seconds in advance of his antagonist, he was working prettily and effectively; long, easy strokes, thirty-two to the minute, telling the story of victory. From this time there was no possible show for Yates. His stroke was short and he didn't utilize his sliding seat as would a strong, confident oarsman. At the end of the second mile Bainbridge was 24½ seconds ahead of Yates. Under High Bridge Bainbridge was greeted with hearty cheers, and he sent his shell spinning up the river in the best possible style and crossed the finish fully fifteen lengths in advance, amid the cheers of hundreds.

Not a Gothamite on the river but was right glad that he had sent his shell home well in front of the Western sculler, who for twelve months has been the champion of the National Association. Time of the winner, 22m. 48⅜s.; Yates, 23m. 19¾s., against both tide and wind. It must be remembered, and the course rowed is fully, if not more, than three miles. These men, with many others of note, meet again on the Harlem on Saturday of this week to contest for the diamond sculls in the third annual reunion of the Harlem Regatta Association.

NEW YORK ROWING CLUB EVENTS—ELLISON WINS THE SENIOR SCULLERS' MEDAL AND LELAND THE JUNIOR SCULLERS' PRIZE.

Supplementing the important championship contest were two events between members of the New York Rowing Club. The first of these was a contest of the senior scullers for the Leland medal, held by Rudolph W. Schack, in which he and Frank Ellison came to the starting point, the former to hold the prize and the latter to win it, if possible. Both men were in the finest possible condition.

The men rowed down stream, starting abreast the Carmansville dock. Considerable interest was attached to the spin, which was set down as one and a half miles. It was stubbornly contested for the first mile, although Ellison led Schack after the first furlong. Ellison reached the Powder schooner three lengths ahead and finished in good style. The distance to the schooner is short of one and a half miles, and the time given to that point was 11m. 44⅛s.

The junior scullers' event brought three contestants to the start. These were Charles Ingersoll, John McKinn and Charles Leland. The course was from Florence's dock to the powder schooner—one mile. Leland won by three and a half lengths. No reliable time can be given.

THE DOUBLE SCULL RACE TO-DAY.

The event on the Harlem this afternoon is the very important double scull race of three miles—Edward Smith and Richard Bainbridge vs. William B. Curtis and Frank Yates. An exciting contest is anticipated. A steamboat will leave the dock above the railroad bridge and accompany the scullers over the course.

THE ANTI-KELLY CAUCUS.

The committee of seven appointed at the Delmonico meeting of the anti-Tammany democrats on Monday evening last, to decide upon what men should be selected from the various Assembly districts to act with the "new party," met yesterday. This committee is composed of E. B. Hart, Bernard Casserly, Judge Murray, Jos. Blumenthal, Bryan Reilly, Gideon Tucker and ex-Recorder Smith. There was no business of any importance transacted by the committee, although the statement was made that the committee had secured the pledges of well known democrats from seventeen assembly districts to do all they could to further the interests of the anti-Tammanyites. It was decided by the committee that another meeting should be held on Friday next, when the assembly lists would be completed, and that a meeting of all the prominent democrats who would by that time have consented to take part in the opposition movement should be held at the Cooper Institute, when arrangements will be made for the formation of a general committee, and a call be issued to the democratic voters of the city.

CUSTOM HOUSE NOTES.

The three cases seized some days since from the steamer Scythia were opened yesterday and inspected at the Seizure Room of the Custom House. They were found to contain books. As yet no person has put in a claim for them. The party importing them is evidently of a cynical turn of mind, if one may judge from the facts of his not putting in a claim to his property and that the works of Jean Jacques Rousseau are on top of one of the seized cases. It may be that the auctioneers of Burling slip may have, at last, to sell the "Confessions" as well as to emancipate from slavery the "New Heloise."

The crêpe conundrum still puzzles the officials at Uncle Sam's granite building, and it is not unlikely the officials wish that no experts had been called to decide on the Schulhoff importations. When one crêpe expert says an article is worth three francs per metre, another gentleman that its value is four francs, and another, of equally good judgment, that it is worth four francs and ten centimes, it is not wonderful that Collector Arthur and his coadjutors should throw up their hands in despair. It is now intimated that Schulhoff & Co. will give the required bonds and await the issue of the suit at law; that the whole matter has been referred to the United States District Attorney, who will report whether there have been any grounds for the suit at all, and so the matter rests for the moment.

Messrs. Hitchcock & Potter are wroth with the Appraisers' Department. They say all the corruption and fraud is there; that without collusion in that department nothing could be done by the fraudulent importer.

A MYSTERIOUS MURDER.

INQUEST YESTERDAY—VERDICT OF THE JURY.

At the Coroners' Office yesterday Coroner Woltman held an inquest in the case of Patrick Reilly, aged fifty-five years, who died at Bellevue Hospital on the 16th inst. from a fracture of the skull, received, in some manner unknown, on the 13th inst. The first witness examined was Mrs. Eliza Foley, of No. 206 West Twenty-seventh street. She testified as follows:—

I was not acquainted with the deceased or his wife; on Sunday morning, June 13, between one and two o'clock, I heard a disturbance in the hallway or upon the stoop of my house; there was a scuffle, but I was unable to recognize the voices nor could I actually tell what they were doing; I remember hearing a voice say, "Lizzie, I have a new pair of shoes," following which a scuffle began and the man was dragged into the hallway, where I heard him say, "You need not search; I have no money; police!" I did not go down stairs, as I was frightened; after the noises stopped I saw the man go down Twenty-seventh street toward Eighth avenue; I did not see any other person on the street nor did I hear any one go up stairs, or do I know what became of the parties at all.

Michael Tuite, of 415 West Twenty-sixth street, testified:—I am a bricklayer; on Sunday morning about seven o'clock I went to Ninth avenue and Twenty-eighth street to buy a newspaper; on my return passing the Ninth avenue stables, I saw a policeman with a man; the man was supporting himself by the railing around the stables, and the officer was standing by him; as I was passing the man called out my name, and on turning around I recognized the man as Patrick Reilly; I asked him what was the matter and who had been beating him; he replied:—"I know who done it very well, but I won't summons them;" the deceased had a cut over his eye and was bleeding from the ears; the policeman asked me if I knew where the man lived; I said I thought he lived in Twenty-seventh street, and Reilly added "Yes, No. 212;" I then undertook to aid the officer in taking charge of the man, and as I took hold of the man he fell and was unable to walk; the policeman said he did not want to take him to the station house, but would take him home if he could, as he was not on duty and it was out of his precinct; Reilly was taken to the Sixteenth precinct station house by two officers, and from there he was removed to Bellevue Hospital, in an unconscious state; he was a man of very good habits and I never saw him intoxicated.

Other witnesses were examined, but their testimony did not show from whom the man received his injuries. The jury rendered a verdict to the effect that the deceased came to his death by a fracture of the skull received on the morning of Sunday, June 13, in some manner unknown.
